Theory and Practice in Voluntary Social Action

Chris L. Clark, 1991 This study asks how social and community workers use knowledge and theory in their practice It is based on research on voluntary action on unemployment in Scotland The author argues that the usual approaches to the problem of relating theory to practice are misconceived and proposes an alternative The research aims to show that practitioners cannot in any simple sense rely on theory to guide their practice but employ a system of beliefs and dispositions which comprise both much less and much more than theory The book also considers the lessons to be learned from voluntary responses to mass unemployment It is shown that practitioners and their organizations were swept along by events and government policies which they were largely powerless to influence This reality is compared with the claims and aspirations of voluntary action Conclusions are drawn on the issues now facing voluntary organizations in the new era of unprecedented but hidden centralism and government control Community Health Nursing Mary Albrecht Nies, Melanie McEwen, 2001 Based on the unique upstream thinking approach that emphasizes health promotion efforts to address the precursors of poor health this edition focuses on the issues responsibilities and roles important for providing contemporary community health nursing care Detailed case studies provide a community component for each step of the nursing process and several new chapters have been added including the economics of health care care of the disabled population and care for clients in prison and parish settings The complete Instructor s Electronic Resource is available on CD ROM and includes PowerPoint slides The Practice of Macro Social Work William G. Brueggemann, 1996 This book is a comprehensive text that covers the important components of macro social work practice including research community and organization development social action and planning and administrative tasks It contains chapters on social problems leadership problem solving and ethics The text considers macro social work to be the heart of authentic social work practice by having the goal of making our society healthier more ethical and just Brueggemann argues that in order for this to be accomplished social work needs to concentrate on restoring and rejuvenating the community a cherished and crucial social system Future oriented The Practice of Macro Social Work challenges students to exercise critical judgement ask questions critique existing theories and examine the direction that social work is taking The Development of Community Organization Practice Theory, 1956-1983 Barbara H. Faison, 1984 Journal of the Canadian Dietetic Association , 1995 Sociological Practice , 1990 Community Work in Canada Brian Wharf, 1979 Dentistry, Dental Practice, and the Community Brian A. Burt, Stephen A. Eklund, Amid I. Ismail, 1999 Here is the thoroughly revised and reorganized 5th Edition of this highly successful dental public health text Updated to reflect the current information and to keep pace with social changes this resource presents dental practice as it relates to social events economy technology and demographic trends and epidemiology Describes how to determine the quality of scientific papers in dental literature This edition features a helpful detailed outline before each chapter and many new tables and graphics
