

Evolution/Development of Comparative politics

I. During Ancient Period:

Since times very ancient, Comparative Politics has been a very popular and useful subject of study within the broad ambit of Political Science.

Aristotle observed the working of 158 constitutions and used the knowledge for answering such questions as:

Which is an ideal state? Which can be the best practicable state?

Which is the best constitution?

comparative study of political institutions, governments and processes has been developing as a major and popular area of investigation with a large number of political scientists. After Aristotle, several political thinkers—Cicero, Polybius, Machiavelli, Montesquieu, J.S. Mill, Bagehot and others, used the comparative method in a highly productive way.
