O livro Comércio eletrônico, de Alberto Luiz Albertin, já em sua segunda edição, trata do potencial das aplicações inovadoras e revolucionárias do comércio eletrônico no novo ambiente empresarial, marcado por profundas mudanças nos últimos anos e tendo a tecnologia de informações como forte viabilizadora. Conforme argumentado pelo próprio autor, o livro tem como principal enfoque a visão de administração, e não os aspectos essencialmente técnicos, os quais estão limitados às necessidades de conhecimento.

"O comércio eletrônico é a realização de toda a cadeia de valor dos processos de negócio num ambiente eletrônico, por meio da aplicação intensa das tecnologias de comunicação e de informação, atendendo aos objetivos de negócio. Os processos podem ser realizados de forma completa ou parcial, incluindo as transações negócio-a-negócio, negócio-a-consumidor e intra-organizacional, numa infra-estrutura predominantemente pública de fácil e livre acesso e baixo custo." Com essa definição clara e ampla, Albertin entre os valores em questão desde as consequências da utilização da tecnologia para o processamento de dados pessoais suas consequências para o livre desenvolvimento da personalidade e sua utilização pelo mercado. O autor desenha a metáfora do habeas mente como garantia contra as publicidades virtuais que utilizam dados pessoais da pessoa conectada em rede assediando ao consumo e consequentemente perturbando o sossego dos consumidores. O reconhecimento da dignidade humana pressupõe a efetiva tutela das potencialidades e liberdades físicas, corporais e psíquicas. O autor igualmente menciona a teoria do desvio produtivo do consumidor como uma das possíveis respostas à ingerência na esfera existencial dos usuários da Internet envolvendo valores como o trabalho, o lazer, o descanso e o convívio pessoal. O tempo do consumidor compete o dano ressarcível assim como os demais danos existenciais da sociedade da informação. A responsabilidade do fornecedor não pode ser eliminada sob a alegação de que o ambiente da Internet de difícil regulação sendo por excelência um espaço de liberdade. Isso seria defender uma imunidade aos valores fundamentais do ordenamento em especial no tocante ao livre desenvolvimento da pessoa humana face às publicidades importunadoras que se valem de dados pessoais inclusive sensíveis. Os aspectos ligados à segurança da informação e em especial da governança corporativa compliance para a proteção de dados pessoais contemplados nos artigos 46 a 51 da Lei Geral de Proteção de Dados servem de reforço à proteção do sossego do consumidor prevenindo situações de tratamento inadequado ou irregular.
