Carson,1997 This revision of a best selling book continues to analyze and explain economic systems using standard supply demand and cost analysis along with property rights Since the first edition appeared in 1990 much of the world has been going through one of history s great economic upheavals in which state managed economies of the Soviet type are transforming themselves into market based systems Coverage in this second edition reflects these changes with an all new chapter on transitional economies All graphs tables and other statistical data have also been updated and a new appendix to chapter one develops the notion of common property to analyze problems of resource depletion and environmental degradation

Comparative Economic Systems A. Zimbalist,2012-12-06 3 edge methods and theory I turn now to some of my own reflections on this score Some Reflections My first proposition is that if we are interested in analyzing the performance and dynamic properties of the world s economies it is only at significant peril that comparative economists can overlook noneconomic or political factors This is not to say that it is illegitimate to abstract from non economic factors for particular purposes rather such abstraction should occur only with cogni zance of the influences being suppressed I have argued elsewhere that the analytical compromise in suppressing noneconomic variables is greater for the study of planned than for market economies 7 Borrowing from Polanyi 8 it is claimed that in market sys tems the economic sphere is disembedded from separate and not subordinate to the political social and cultural spheres while in planned systems the economic sphere is embedded in the noneconomic spheres To be sure market economies are strongly affected by political and cultural factors but planned economies have and often exercise the potential to let political goals dominate in making production allocational or distributional choices Indeed it is difficult in practice to separate out what are political and what are economic decisions in planned systems
