Commissioners to compile, and revise the statute laws, 1878 Report of the Royal Commission on the Electoral System New Zealand. Royal Commission on the Electoral System, 1986 The establishment of this Royal Commission reflected concern that it was time a far reaching and searching examination of our electoral system was undertaken the Commission was given very wide terms of reference which required consideration not only of our electoral system but also of various other parliamentary and political arrangements Especially because of the term of reference concerning Maori representation we made a particular effort to ascertain the views of Maori people making it clear that we were happy to receive either written submissions or oral submissions prepared and presented in ways consistent with Maori custom Bearing in mind that for reasons of impartiality it was not thought appropriate to appoint to the Commission anyone who had been a member of the House of representatives we considered it important to hear the views of MPs In addition to inquiries by correspondence various members of the Commission were able to visit the Federal Republic of Germany the Republic of Ireland Australia Canada and the United Kingdom to pursue inquiries concerning matters of particular relevance to our work We came to the conclusion that it would be desirable to have accurate and factual histories both of the development of our electoral system and of Maori representation This is primarily because any electoral system is to a crucial extent the product of the specific history and environment of the country concerned We are grateful to Mr B Ritchie of the Justice Department who wrote almost all the general history We are also grateful to Professor M P K Sorrenson of Auckland University who used his extensive knowledge to write the history of Maori representation The histories are published as Appendices A and B to our Report Preface
