Defence Science And Technology Adjusting To Change:

Defence Science and Technology Richard Coopey, Graham Spinardi, Matthew Uttley, 1993 Defence related industries are central to the economies of most of the advanced nations with defence and civil industrial bases often inextricably linked This book discusses the key questions surrounding the relationship between defence and civil industry This collection of studies highlights the complex nature of this relationship and the equally complex determinants of corporate government policy in this area The contributors present us with analysis based on historical and contemporary examples juxtaposed with informed debate on the future relationship between defence and civil technological policy The late 1980s and early 1990s have witnessed a profound change in the international security environment The Gulf War the demise of the former Soviet Union and the restructuring of Eastern Europe have forced a re examination of defence policies weapons procurement strategies and research and development agendas throughout the Western world Exploding the Myth? Derek Braddon, 2014-02-25

From a cold war peak of some 1000 billion per annum world military expenditure has declined by about 40% since 1990 reaching its lowest level for thirty years With such significant decline in global public expenditure commitments to the defence sector a substantial and lasting peace dividend was anticipated Most governments believed that market forces left more or less to their own devices would deal effectively with this major exogenous shock and generate sufficient new economic activity to allow increased public expenditure on health education and welfare The approach of this book is to challenge the fundamental but flawed belief that a substantial and lasting peace dividend could be secured through market solution alone The principal assertion is that market adjustment by itself cannot deliver such a dividend The book focuses on the major aspects of the economic business and security consequences of post Cold War defence expenditure reduction Key problems obstructing optimal market response are identified and possible remedial action by government and others is considered Economic Restructuring And Social Exclusion Canterbury. Phillip Brown; Rosemary Crompton both of the University of Kent, 2020-04-03 This book is intended for undergraduate and postgraduate courses in social structure and political sociology as well as academic sociologists and libraries It should have significant appeal to researchers and students in European studies and others interested in European integration Warfare State David Edgerton, 2005-12-08 A challenge to the central theme of the existing histories of twentieth century Britain that the British state was a welfare state this book argues that it was also a warfare state which supported a powerful armaments industry This insight implies major revisions to our understanding of twentieth century British history from appeasement to wartime industrial and economic policy and the place of science and technology in government David Edgerton also shows how British intellectuals came to think of the state in terms of welfare and decline and includes a devastating analysis of C P Snow's two cultures This groundbreaking book offers a new post welfarist and post declinist account of Britain and an original analysis of the relations of science technology industry and the military It will be essential reading for those working on the history and historiography of twentieth century Britain the historical sociology of war and the history of science and technology Defence Management, 1996 Technology and Security Brian Rappert, 2007-10-11 Taking forward the state of academic understanding where security and technology intersect this title assesses the challenges posed by scientific and technological developments for security while understanding how perceptions of security threats are themselves formed Commercializing High Technologies Judith Sedaitis, 1996-12-30 Commercializing High Technologies East and West discusses key issues in the problems and opportunities of technology transfer that today confront both Russia and the United States In the wake of the Cold War and dwindling state support research and development firms now more than ever need to access the market potential of their substantial and often cutting edge technologies The essays in this book examine the organizational managerial and practical implications of pursuing a policy of technology transfer in government defense research sectors the commonalities and differences between the two countries as well as the sizable and varying risks involved and even the greater risk involved of ignoring the problems posed Cold War, Hot Science Robert Bud, Philip Gummert, Science Museum (Great Britain), 1999 Cold War Hot Science presents an authoritative history of post war British defence research as related to the establishments that now form part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency DERA The agency includes such well known centres as the Royal Aircraft Establishment at Farnborough the Royal Signals and Radar Establishment at Malvern and the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down Collectively these have carried out a very high proportion of all the scientific research conducted in Britain since the war Study of these vast but traditionally secretive institutions is vital to understanding science in post war Britain BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved Combat Journal, 1994 Proceedings, 2000 Defense White Paper, 1992

Japanese Success? British Failure? □□□□, 1997 The significance in business and economic history of Japan's startling rise in international competitiveness since the mid 1950s has not only given business academics much food for thought but has also served to increase the amount of English language writing on modern Japan Many researchers have sought to dissect the economic miracle isolating key factors which range from the national character and consensus to the favourable conjunction of market forces from unique structural elements and government policy to a free ride based in American support and free trade This new book uses a comparative perspective to shed important new light on the components of the miracle By looking at the key components of international competitiveness in Japan and Britain new light is shed on the secrets of Japanese growth and refinement of allegations of British failure There are two contributions one written by a Japanese scholar the other by a British scholar on the key variables the government industry relationship management structures education and training and finance The book concludes with new case studies of automobiles and electronics The essays revise many established notions concerning the two countries Differences in education business links for example are not as pronounced as is often claimed and the performance gap in financial services is now much narrower The book will
