Democratization And Identity:

Identity in Democracy Amy Gutmann, 2009-01-10 Written by one of America's leading political thinkers this is a book about the good the bad and the ugly of identity politics Amy Gutmann rises above the raging polemics that often characterize discussions of identity groups and offers a fair minded assessment of the role they play in democracies She addresses fundamental questions of timeless urgency while keeping in focus their relevance to contemporary debates Do some identity groups undermine the greater democratic good and thus their own legitimacy in a democratic society Even if so how is a democracy to fairly distinguish between groups such as the KKK on the one hand and the NAACP on the other Should democracies exempt members of some minorities from certain legitimate or widely accepted rules such as Canada's allowing Sikh members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to wear turbans instead of Stetsons Do voluntary groups like the Boy Scouts have a right to discriminate on grounds of sexual preference gender or race Identity group politics Gutmann shows is not aberrant but inescapable in democracies because identity groups represent who people are not only what they want and who people are shapes what they demand from democratic politics Rather than trying to abolish identity politics Gutmann calls upon us to distinguish between those demands of identity groups that aid and those that impede justice Her book does justice to identity groups while recognizing that they cannot be counted upon to do likewise to others Clear engaging and forcefully argued Amy Gutmann's Identity in Democracy provides the fractious world of multicultural and identity group scholarship with a unifying work that will sustain it for years to come

Henders, 2004 The notable contributors to Democratization and Identity introduce the experiences of East and Southeast Asia into the study of democratization in ethnically including religiously diverse societies This collection suggests that the risk of ethnicized conflict exclusion or hierarchy during democratization depends in large part on the nature of the ethnic identities and relations constituted during authoritarian rule This volume's theoretical breakthroughs and its country case studies shed light on the prospects for ethnically inclusive and non hierarchical democratization across East and Southeast Asia and beyond

Proceedings of the 2nd International Conference on Democracy and Social Transformation (ICON-DEMOST 2023) Naili Ni'matul Illiyyun,Endang Supriadi,Ririh Megah Safitri,Masrohatun Masrohatun,2024-01-05 This is an open access book Faculty of Social and Political Science State Islamic University Walisongo Semarang has been playing significant roles in building global peace and justice by conducting scientific research and creating a space for academic dialogue and discussion This goal is in line with our vision to be a Research Faculty based on the unity of sciences for humanity and civilization As part of the efforts to create a space for academic dialogue at a global level we organize an international conference which aims to develop scientific knowledge build institutional capacity and strengthen international networking The conference is also held to support State Islamic University Walisongo Semarang in achieving its vision to be an Islamic world class university The conference raises the issue of democracy and social transformation to capture the social and political dynamics The selection of this topic is based on the idea that technological development is becoming a crucial issue within modern society in which people tend to experience alienation within the rapid social and political transformation Democracy as a political system that ensures transparency citizen participation and human rights protection is now under threat Having the fact that there is a growing tendency of using transactional politics to win political interests such as the use of money and identity in political processes therefore political analysts consider this situation as the regression of democracy Rapid social and cultural transformation as a consequence of advanced technology creates problems in modern society On one hand technology has made the life of people easier However on the other hand the sense of humanity's values and principles is declining This situation can be observed in the decrease in social solidarity and the rise of individualism Modernity that values productivity and economic growth has brought a negative impact on the life of human being and nature The exploitative character of industrialization has created an ecological crisis Advanced information technology has loosened social cohesivity and the rise of instrumental rationality has removed local genius or local wisdom from the life of society Since the ultimate goal of humanity is respecting the dignity of human beings hence bringing back humanity to the center of the development program is crucial especially in the current social and political dynamics In the political context humanity means respecting the basic rights of the citizen and putting them as a subject of political development and not perceiving citizens as only an instrument to win political power Based on the above background this conference is organized The overall goal of the conference is to mainstream humanity in the current social and political change The conference is also expected to be an arena for scholars and experts in social and political science as well as practitioners and policymakers to meet and exchange ideas and perspectives for a better future of our society

until about 1990 draws on his own perceptions and on interviews with government and business leaders conducted in the early 1990s to explore the national identity of a country that was created out of a refugee camp He also discusses changes in society and government prospects for democracy and the impending reintegration with China Paper edition unseen 19 95 Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR The Politics of Identity and the Breakthrough of Liberal Democracy in Poland, 1980-1999 Michael Randell Carpenter, 2002 Democratization, National Identity and Foreign Policy in Asia Gilbert Rozman, 2021-04-20 How can democratization move forward in an era of populist nationalist backlash Many countries in Asia and elsewhere face the challenge of navigating between China and the United States in a period of intensifying polarization in their policies tied to democracy East Asia has shown the way to democratization in Asia with Japan South Korea and Taiwan linking national identity to democratization In other parts of Asia especially Southeast Asia nationalist governments have tended to move away from democratization as happened in Hong Kong at China's insistence This book investigates how national identity can both help and hinder democratization illustrated by a series of examples from across Asia A valuable guide for students and scholars both of democratization and of Asian politics Defending Identity Andrew A. Rooney, Natan Sharansky, 2010-10 Who is better prepared to confront challenges and defend principles in a volatile modern world Those with strong national religious ethnic or tribal identities who accept democracy or democrats who renounce identity as a kind of divisive prejudice Natan Sharansky building on his personal experience as a dissident argues that valueless cosmopolitanism even in democracies is dangerous Better to have hostile identities framed by democracy than democrats indifferent to identity In a vigorous insightful challenge to the left and right alike Natan Sharansky as he has proved repeatedly is at the leading edge of the issues that frame our times Identity Reconstruction Rou-lan Chen, 2011 National identity is one of the most theoretically important and frequently used concepts for understanding the dynamics of political transition social conflicts and economic development in Taiwan A brief review of national identity theories indicates its multidimensional quality However relatively little empirical research has been done to prove the multidimensional concept of national identity Conceptual haziness has created serious problems in the study of Taiwan's identity politics Hence the insufficiency of current research leads to the first goal of this study that is to conceptualize a multidimensional concept of national identity To test for the suggested two dimensional national identity this study uses confirmatory factor analysis to uncover dimensions of national identity Our analysis is shown to agree with a two dimensional primordial and political structure of national identity On the one hand national identity is characterized by a belief in common descent a sense of difference from other ethnic groups and a pride in one's own ethnic community On the other hand national identity is a political artifact constituted by nationhood and a desire for citizenship Second the two dimensions of national identity are proved to be complementary Third and most important our findings share similarities with the constructive perspective that operational definitions of national identity carry different meanings at different times The concept of national identity in Taiwan is context dependent conditional on the democratization process and cross strait interactions We have proved that the concept of national identity is two dimensional and changeable over time Now we must focus on the questions of why and how national identity changes The second part of this dissertation emphasizes the ways in which national identities have been changed There have been various approaches in academic discussions to investigate the conditions which conducive to identity changes To break the individualist approach that currently dominates the field of national identity the main goal is to incorporate macro level factors into micro level studies to explain identity change The general findings can be summarized by stating that identity formation and change in Taiwan has to be understood not only in terms of individual characteristics but also in relation to structural influences Particularly the democratic transition and a rising China have brought about various types of mechanisms which force individuals to search for a new identity that can adequately represent their inner ego in response to sociopolitical changes
