Assistant Professor of English, the Standard Fireworks Rajaramnam ,College for Women, Sivakasi- 626 123, India

Abstract

The unique and inhumane treatment of the Dalits as untouchables is mirrored in many of the literary works created by the Dalit writers. The Dalit writers have the vision of removing untouchability and establishing equality. They take up the mantle as they feel that no one else will take it up with such authenticity. P.Sivakami is one of the earliest Tamil Dalit writers who draws attention to the dual oppression of Dalit women on account of gender and caste at the hands of upper caste men and Dalit men. The article titled "Suppression and Sufferings of Dalits: A Study of P.Sivakami's The Grip of Change" portrays the plight and sufferings of the Dalits.

KEYWORDS: oppression, plight, sufferings, downtrodden

Dalit Literature is a purposive revolutionary transformation and protest literature. It is marked by revolt and negativism, since it is closely associated with the hopes for freedom by a group of people who, as untouchables, are victims of social, economic and cultural inequality. The unique and inhumane treatment of the Dalits as untouchables is mirrored in many of the literary works created by the Dalit writers. The Dalit writers have the vision of removing untouchability and establishing equality. They take up the mantle as they feel that no one else will take it up with such authenticity.

P.Sivakami is one of the earliest Tamil Dalit writers who draws attention to the dual oppression of Dalit women on account of gender and caste at the hands of upper caste men and Dalit men. She was initially an I.A.S. officer. She gave up her job to become a full time writer. She is self-translator too. The novel The Grip of Change written by Sivakami was first published in Tamil as Pazhsaiyama Kazhithalum in 1989 and later translated to English by the author herself. Sivakami's novels portray the rustic story of women who suffer at the hands of men who strongly believe in and stand for patriarchy. The conflicts and struggles are between tenacious women and tyrannical men in the contemporary society. The article titled "Suppression and Sufferings of Dalits: A Study of P.Sivakami's The Grip of Change" portrays the plight and sufferings of the Dalits.

The sufferings of Dalits are a never ending chain for several decades. Power and economical background is the main source for hierarchical structures of caste. People who have power and position are placed at the centre of the society and they become dominant groups while the poor and the powerless are pushed to the marginalized. The Dalits are deprived of all basic needs- food, clothes and shelter. They are not allowed to reside in an area where the higher caste people live. They were marginalized as untouchables, discriminated and denied their basic human rights. In The Grip of Change, Kathamuthu, Thangam, Gowri and many other characters experience the caste bias.
