   Discourse in Late Modernity Lilie Chouliaraki,Norman Fairclough,1999 Discourse in Late Modernity sets out to show that critical discourse analysis is strongly positioned to address empirical research and theory building across the social sciences particularly research and theory on the semiotic linguistic aspects of the social world It situates critical discourse analysis as a form of critical social research in relation to diverse theories from the philosophy of science to social theory and from political science to sociology and linguistics First the authors clarify the ontological and epistemological assumptions of critical discourse analysis its view of what the social world consists of and how to study it and in so doing point to the connections between critical discourse analysis and critical social scientific research more generally Secondly they relate critical discourse analysis to social theory by creating a research agenda in contemporary social life on the basis of narratives of late modernity particularly those of Giddens Habermas and Harvey as well as feminist and postmodernist approaches Thirdly they show the relevance of sociological work in the analysis of discursive aspects of social life drawing on the work of Bourdieu and Bernstein to theorise the dialectic of social reproduction and change and on post structuralist post colonial and feminist work to theorise the dialectic of complexity and homogenisation in contemporary societies Finally they discuss the relationship between systemic functional linguistics and critical discourse analysis showing how the analytical strength of each can benefit from the other Sets out a new and distinctive theoretical grounding and research agenda for critical discourse analysis Interdisciplinary in scope Draws on a broad range of theories and approaches   Discourse in Late Modernity; Rethinking Critical..
