

HAMLET: A COMPREHENSIVE GUIDE

RUBRIC: MINDSCAPES

In this elective, students explore and evaluate how literary texts can invite responders to engage with the interior worlds of individuals and how they perceive, think, and feel about themselves and the societies in which they live. They analyse how texts communicate notions of identity and acceptable ways of being, and thinking through representations of the mind, including desires, motivations, emotions, and experiences. Students consider how these diverse textual representations invite the responder to experience insight into the lives of other groups and individuals, and other times and places. Students critically evaluate the values and assumptions embedded in texts and consider their own in relation to issues reflected in texts. They reflect on the ways in which study of the texts may influence their own sense of identity.

In their responding and composing, they explore, analyse, experiment with and critically evaluate their prescribed texts and other appropriate texts. They write their own imaginative compositions that represent the interior worlds of others.

In this elective, students are required to study at least three of the prescribed texts (including at least two extended print texts) as well as other texts of their own choosing. At least two related texts must be studied. Texts can be drawn from a range of times, contexts and media and should explore the interior world of others.

The general worlds of language of the common module, combined with the specifics of the elective, make for powerful combos: how does a world of surveillance shape our identity. So for your reference, I have linked the common module, Literary Worlds, rubric below;

In this module students explore, investigate, experiment with and evaluate the ways texts represent and illuminate the complexity of individual and collective lives in literary worlds. Students evaluate how ideas and ways of thinking are shaped by personal, social, historical and cultural contexts. They extend their understanding of the ways that texts contribute to their awareness of the diversity of ideas, attitudes, and perspectives evident in texts.

Students explore, analyse and critically evaluate textual representations of the experiences of others, including notions of identity, voice and points of view, and how values are presented and reflected in texts. They deepen their understanding of how texts construct private, public and imaginary worlds that can explore how humans and offer new insights.

Students consider how personal, social, historical and cultural context influence how texts are valued and how context influences their responses to these diverse literary worlds. They appraise their own values, assumptions and dispositions as they develop further understanding of how texts make meaning.

In their study of literary worlds students experiment with critical and creative compositions that explore how language features and forms are crafted to express complex ideas and emotions, motivations, attitudes, experiences and values. These compositions may be created in various forms, modes and media.

Each elective in this module involves the study of three texts from the prescribed list, with at least two being print texts. Students explore, analyse and critically evaluate a range of other texts that construct private, public and imaginary worlds.

Hamlet. 16th ed William Shakespeare,1877 The Tragedy of Hamlet William Shakespeare,1909 Discourses, Texts, Contexts Wojciech Kalaga,1990 Shakespeare's Hamlet Wilbraham Fitzjohn Trench,1913 The Works of Shakespeare: Hamlet, ed. by E. Dowden. 1899 William Shakespeare,1899 Interruptions in Early Modern English Drama Michael M. Wagoner,2022-09-22 To interrupt both on stage and off is to wrest power From the Ghost's appearance in Hamlet to Celia's frightful speech in Volpone interruptions are an overlooked linguistic and dramatic form that delineates the balance of power within a scene This book analyses interruptions as a specific form in dramatic literature arguing that these everyday occurrences when transformed into aesthetic phenomena reveal illuminating connections between characters between actor and audience and between text and reader Focusing on the works of William Shakespeare Ben Jonson and John Fletcher Michael M Wagoner examines interruptions that occur through the use of punctuation and stage directions as well as through larger forms such as conventions and dramaturgy He demonstrates how studying interruptions may indicate aspects of authorial style emphasizing a playwright's use and control of a text and how exploring relative power dynamics pushes readers and audiences to reconsider key plays and characters providing new considerations of the relationships between Othello and Iago or Macbeth and the Ghost of Banquo Hamlet and Emotions Paul Megna,Bríd Phillips,R.S. White,2019-02-01 This volume bears potent testimony not only to the dense complexity of Hamlet's emotional dynamics but also to the enduring fascination that audiences adaptors and academics have with what may well be Shakespeare's moodiest play Its chapters explore emotion in Hamlet as well as the myriad emotions surrounding Hamlet's debts to the medieval past its relationship to the cultural milieu in which it was produced its celebrated performance history and its profound impact beyond the early modern era Its component chapters are not unified by a single methodological approach Some deal with a single emotion in Hamlet while others analyse the emotional trajectory of a single character and still others focus on a given emotional expression e.g. sighing or crying Some bring modern methodologies for studying emotion to bear on Hamlet others explore how Hamlet anticipates modern discourses on emotion and still others ask how Hamlet itself can complicate and contribute to our current understanding of emotion Source and Discourse Theresa Pia Suriano,1998 The Tragedy of Hamlet Henry Frank,1910
