A. PURPOSE / DESCRIPTION

This course provides a comprehensive overview of macroeconomic issues. The determination of output, employment, unemployment, interest rates, and inflation are studied. Monetary and fiscal policies are discussed. Important policy debates such as, the sub-prime crisis, social security, the public debt, and international economic issues are critically explored. This course introduces basic models of macroeconomics and illustrates principles with the experience of the U.S. and foreign economies.

Prerequisites: Microeconomics

Macroeconomics focuses on the working of the overall economy whereas Microeconomics emphasizes the behavior of individual actors, such as firms and households, under various constraints. This 4-credit Macroeconomics course covers a broader array of macroeconomic topics than are included in the 4 and 5-credit courses that cover both microeconomics and macroeconomics. Intermediate Macroeconomics provides a deeper analysis of different macroeconomic models. International Finance provides a focus on the international aspects of the economic system, while Money & Banking involves a more detailed examination of the role of the banking system and money creation in a modern economy. Other specialized courses may examine the functioning of specific sectors as well as the gender and environmental aspects of environmental decision making.

This course was previously SACS-212214 Economics/Macro.

B. LEARNING OUTCOMES

1. Describe the methods social scientists use to explore social and economic phenomena.
2. Explain the terms and concepts of macroeconomics.
3. Apply the tools and techniques of macroeconomic analysis.

C. Learning Activities

You will be asked to complete the following types of learning activities in this course, each with its own purpose:

Readings and Practice

You will be responsible for reading the designated text chapters defined in the course schedule for each module and for utilizing the associated Krugman-Wellis testing site to strengthen your skills in applying the microeconomic principles to the solution of objective problems. As part of that process, Learning Curve assignments have been designated for each module to help you achieve a mastery level understanding of the concepts for each chapter. After completing the Learning Curve assignment for each chapter, you will then go onto to complete the assigned Homework questions for each chapter as well. In addition to the Krugman-Wellis testing site, there are also "Check Your Understanding" questions at the end of each section of each chapter which can be used to enhance your understanding of the principles. Suggested answers to these questions are at the back of the text.

Discussions

The discussions are intended to help you further explore and think critically about and apply the information you are reading and viewing to actual current economic issues. Since there is much overlap of micro and macro issues, we will use this tool to explore the full range of economic issues and principles as they apply to the current economy and as they relate to the micro participants. The discussions give you the opportunity to express your understanding of the principles as they relate to your outside readings and to your personal experiences. Expect you to be an active participant. Active participation means that you are logging on two times a week and posting a contribution each time. Participation in the discussions will be worth twenty percent of your grade and is a requirement of this course.

Written Assignments

Each module has a designated set of objective economic problems designed to test your ability to apply the microeconomic principles to the solution of quantitative and other objective problem-solving issues. The objective problem assignments have been designated in the Aplis software and are completed by utilizing the designated links to the specific problem sets associated with each module. The specific assignments for each module and the due dates are presented in the "Course Schedule" document below. Your objective problem assignments will account for eighty percent of your grade.

This course is divided into five modules. Each module includes readings, written assignments, and discussions.

Module 1: Introduction to Microeconomics

Module 2: Market Processes
