Handbook of Effective Inclusive Schools James McLeskey, Fred Spooner, Bob Algozzine, Nancy, L. Waldron, 2014-05-16 Over the last decade the educational context for students with disabilities has significantly changed primarily as a result of mandates contained in NCLB and IDEA The purpose of this book is to summarize the research literature regarding how students might be provided classrooms and schools that are both inclusive and effective Inclusive schools are defined as places where students with disabilities are valued and active participants in academic and social activities and are given supports that help them succeed Effectiveness is addressed within the current movement toward multi tiered systems of support and evidence based practices that meet the demands of high stakes accountability The Inclusion of Students with Significant Disabilities and Their Access to the General Education Curriculum, 2018 Students with significant disabilities are continually placed in restrictive settings with a focus on functional and life skills becoming more excluded from their peers in the general education setting This limits their access to the general education curriculum requirements of No Child Left Behind NCLB 2002 Individuals with Disabilities Education Act IDEA 2004 and Every Student Succeeds Act ESSA 2015 These mandates expect all students with disabilities to make progress on the grade level content standards They fail to explain to education professionals how they are to be implemented for students with significant disabilities By defining the type of students who are classified as having a significant disability and understanding the general education curriculum setting we can clarify what is expected and perceived by educators to apply these mandates Teachers remark all students including those with significant disabilities should be taught in the general education classroom to receive access to the general education curriculum standards These educators also share concerns of how access comes into daily practice and instruction There are strategies such as pre teacher programs Universal Design for Learning collaboration and modifications to the curriculum The Beyond Access Model The Self Determination Model and Dynamic Learning Maps as specific programs to provide structured models to assist educators in helping students work toward their grade level standards All of these systems help general and special education teachers to work together to see access come to life for students with significant disabilities in their classrooms Leaf 4
