

General Psychology Study Guide – Unit Two

Chapter 2: Behavioral Neuroscience

- 1) Be able to describe the overall structure of the nervous system, and differentiate between the functions of each (i.e., the central and the peripheral; the somatic and the autonomic; and the sympathetic and the parasympathetic).
- 2) What are the functions of the endocrine system, and how does it communicate information in the body and the brain? What is the so-called “master gland”, and which structure in the brain regulates its activity?
- 3) What are the functions of neurons and of glial cells? Differentiate between the functions of the three classes of neurons: sensory neurons, motor neurons, and interneurons.
- 4) Understand how reflexes take place in the spinal cord.
- 5) Be able to identify the following parts of a neuron, and describe the functions of each: dendrites, soma (cell body), nucleus, axon, myelin sheath, synapse, axon terminals, receptor sites and vesicles. (see Figures 2.6 and 2.7)
- 6) Explain the electrochemical process by which neurons communicate.
 - a) Why is it that when a neuron is at rest it has a negative electrical potential, or charge?
 - b) Understand that all information in the nervous system is coded in the form of action potentials. Understand that this electrical event is triggered when the electrical potential of the cell membrane reaches a certain threshold value. The action potential then travels down the axon until it finally reaches the synapses at the axon terminal buttons. What is the effect of the action potential when it reaches the terminal buttons?
 - c) What does it mean to say that an action potential is governed by the all-or-none response?
- 7) What are neurotransmitters? Understand how neurotransmitters produce either excitatory or inhibitory effects on receiving neurons.
