complex questions by offering a critical overview of the contemporary debates and discussions surrounding gender and mediated communication and by providing students with an overview of the current academic research on these topics. The book is divided into three parts representing producing and consuming, with each section made up of three chapters. The first chapter of each section attempts to answer the most basic questions: Who is represented? Who produces what? and Who consumes what? The second chapter of each section draws attention to the complexity of the relationship between gender and media, concentrating on the why. The third and final chapter of each section addresses the latest debates in the fields of media and gender, adding a vital layer of understanding of the topic at hand. This process is aided by text boxes which provide some additional information on the most important concepts and topics and exercises which help bridge the gap between theory and everyday life media practices. This will be an ideal textbook for students studying gender and media and for general courses on gender studies, sociology, cultural studies and women's studies.
