The Archaeology of Imperial Landscapes Bleda S. Düring,Tesse D. Stek,2018-03-29 The Archaeology of Imperial Landscapes examines the transformation of rural landscapes and societies that formed the backbone of ancient empires in the Near East and Mediterranean Through a comparative approach to archaeological data it analyses the patterns of transformation in widely differing imperial contexts in the ancient world Bringing together a range of studies by an international team of scholars the volume shows that empires were dynamic diverse and experimental polities and that their success or failure was determined by a combination of forceful interventions as well as the new possibilities for those dominated by empires to collaborate and profit from doing so By highlighting the processes that occur in rural and peripheral landscapes the volume demonstrates that the archaeology of these non urban and literally eccentric spheres can provide an important contribution to our understanding of ancient empires The bottom up approach to the study of ancient empires is crucial to understanding how these remarkable socio political organisms could exist and persist Essays on Turkish Literature and History Barbara Flemming,2017-10-17 In Essays on Turkish Literature and History Barbara Flemming makes available essays partly previously published in German They offer insights gained through decades of scholarship Although the Ottoman period is central a wide range is covered including an early Turkish principality Mamluk and Ottoman Egypt and contemporary southeastern Turkey The essays look into historical and political factors involved in the preoccupation with the world s ending into Muslim Christian dialogue the sultan s prayer before battle and the bilingualism of poets Of particular interest are the sections on female participation in mysticism on an anti Sufi movement in Cairo on the Ottoman capital s appeal to collectors and emigrants Diez S sheim B hlau and on the far reaching effects of alphabet change

Rome and Persia at War Peter Edwell,2020-10-25 This book focuses on conflict diplomacy and religion as factors in the relationship between Rome and Sasanian Persia in the third and fourth centuries AD During this period military conflict between Rome and Sasanian Persia was at a level and depth not seen mostly during the Parthian period At the same time contact between the two empires increased markedly and contributed in part to an increased level of conflict Edwell examines both war and peace diplomacy trade and religious contact as the means through which these two powers competed and by which they sought to gain maintain and develop control of territories and peoples who were the source of dispute between the two empires The volume also analyses internal factors in both empires that influenced conflict and competition between them while the roles of regional powers such as the Armenians Palmyrenes and Arabs in conflict and contact between the two super powers receive special attention Using a broad array of sources this book gives special attention to the numismatic evidence as it has tended to be overshadowed in modern studies by the literary and epigraphic sources This is the first monograph in English to undertake an in depth and critical analysis of competition and contact between Rome and the early Sasanians in the Near East in the third and fourth centuries AD using literary archaeological numismatic and epigraphic evidence and one which includes the complete range of mechanisms by which the two powers competed It is an invaluable study for anyone working on Rome Persia and the wider Near East in Late Antiquity Archaeology at the North-east Anatolian Frontier, I. A. G. Sagona,Claudia Sagona,2004 This volume presents a framework for interpreting cultural development in the highlands of Anatolia from the earliest settlements to the recent past Begun in 1988 investigations by the University of Melbourne in cooperation with the Erzurum Museum have studied how past human societies adapted to and modified highland environments After considerations of concepts such as frontiers borders and boundaries that can be easily applied to north east Anatolia the study moves to an analysis of the complex literary tradition with a view to detailing an historical geography of the Bayburt and Erzurum regions The ethnicity of the Diauehi the identification of Sinoria of Mithradates fame and a new proposal for the route taken by Xenophon and his 10 000 troops are among the novel ideas now associated with this once neglected region The second part deals with material culture Beginning with an environmental conspectus the study presents the results of a survey carried out in Bayburt during 1988 and 1990 93 An ample catalogue of finds supplements a detailed Register of Sites To ensure comprehensiveness as complete a ceramic sequence for north east Anatolia as is possible to prepare at this stage is also provided Using both textual and archaeological data this study provides an extensive yet holistic picture of cultural change in the highlands As such it provides a valuable resource for the study of the antiquity of east Anatolia and neighbouring lands

A View from the Highlands Charles Burney, 2004 Interest in the mountainous regions of the Syro Mesopotamian plain came relatively late in the development of Near Eastern archaeology In the psyche of scholars who were attracted initially to the civilisations of the lowlands the edge of the rugged highland terrain formed a disciplinary boundary as much as a geographical one While an initial spurt of interest in the ancient mountain cultures of Anatolia was expressed in the early 1900s it was short lived Subsequently archaeological explorations in the highest altitudes in Anatolia languished until the 1950s and the arrival of Charles Burney who through a series of pioneering projects rediscovered the Kingdom of Urartu and prepared solid foundations for the future study of earlier periods Always probing and speculative Charles Burney has been a source of inspiration for archaeologists working in the highlands of east Anatolia Trans Caucasus and north west Iran Despite the difficulties that modern political boundaries presented in this geographically broken terrain he has managed to offer engaging accounts of its pre classical past without ever losing sight of its human element The essays gathered in this volume are a reflection of an archaeological community that wishes to pay tribute to a scholar whose panoramic vision of antiquity is rivalled only by the wide extent of his generosity expressed in so many ways to fellow workers in the field Although this is a substantial volume of essays written by pupils friends and colleagues the contributors are merely representatives of a much larger number who join them in honouring him

Homo Migrants Megan J. Daniels, 2022-04-01 One of the most significant challenges in archaeology is understanding how and why humans migrate Homo Migrants examines the past present and future states of migration and mobility studies in archaeological discourse Contributors draw on revolutionary twenty first century advances in genetics isotope studies and data manipulation that have resolved longstanding debates about past human movement and have helped clarify the relationships between archaeological remains and human behavior and identity. These emerging techniques have also pressed archaeologists and historians to develop models that responsibly incorporate method theory and data in ways that honor the complexity of human behavior and relationships. This volume articulates the challenges that lie ahead as scholars draw from genomic studies computational science social theory cognitive and evolutionary studies environmental history and network analysis to clarify the nature of human migration in world history. With case studies focusing on European and Mediterranean history and prehistory as well as global history Homo Migrants presents integrated methodologies and analyses that will interest any scholar researching migration and mobility in the human past.
