This translation has two purposes One is to demonstrate how the Hebrew of Tanakh is best translated that is to say into a vigorous and dynamic English that recreates for the English speaking reader an equivalent experience to that of the reader of the original Hebrew For the authors of Tanakh Hebrew was a living language the language of their everyday speech A faithful translation into English then should bring over the Hebrew into the English that is spoken and written by English speakers of today The second purpose of this translation is to bring to life the stories of Samuel Saul and David or as I refer to them in my translation Shmu el Sha ul and Dawid so that their literary merit may more easily be appreciated by those who don't read ancient Hebrew These stories are among the outstanding examples of literature from the ancient world and are worthy of being read and appreciated on their own as literature regardless of whether one views them as scripture This translation is unique in a number of ways First it is the only English translation that respects the role of the ancient literary divisions the parashot petuhot and parashot setumot Removing the medieval chapter divisions as I have done and displaying the text according to the ancient literary divisions greatly enhances the narrative flow and reveals numerous dramatic effects that are invisible in translations which are organized according to the medieval chapter divisions Second this translation prioritizes dynamic equivalence far more than other English translations As a result it is superior to other English translations in capturing the energy and vibrancy of the prose in Shmu el Uniquely among ancient Hebrew prose the principal author of Shmu el strove to represent the spoken Hebrew Nearly all the dialogue is written in a colloquial style full of idiomatic language a faithful translation then must reflect this with colloquial and idiomatic English Lastly the translation is illustrated with representations from the Megiddo Ivories dating the 13th century BCE The use of ancient art to illustrate the text allows the modern reader to get closer to how the original audience might have imagined the action in the text as they were reading or hearing it for the first time McClure's Magazine ,1928 The Athenaeum ,1842 Collier's

Once a Week ,1927 The Judge ,1927 Sunday School Times ,1882 The Australian Christian Commonwealth
