Distributed Decision Making Report Of A Workshop:

Distributed Decision Making National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Human-Systems Integration, Committee on Human Factors, 1990-02-01 Decision making in today's organizations is often distributed widely and usually supported by such technologies as satellite communications electronic messaging teleconferencing and shared data bases Distributed Decision Making outlines the process and problems involved in dispersed decision making draws on current academic and case history information and highlights the need for better theories improved research methods and more interdisciplinary studies on the individual and organizational issues associated with distributed decision making An appendix provides additional background reading on this socially and economically important problem area

Distributed Decision Making: Report of a Workshop NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL WASHINGTON DC COMMITTEE ON HUMAN FACTORS., 1990 The distribution of information authority personnel and resources is part of the reality facing military units companies with dispersed sales forces forest fire fighters diplomatic services and negotiating teams In addition to daunting logistics and other technical problems these organizations face fundamental difficulties in making and coordinating decisions that will serve the interests of both the organization as a whole and the individuals within it Part of this problem is the tension between the need to control the individuals involved and the need to let them respond to the demands of their own immediate situations part is the difficulty of translating overall objectives into terms that will be meaningful in the diverse concrete situations encountered throughout the organization and part is the challenge of creating incentive systems that will properly motivate personnel Keywords Decision making Workshops CP
