Parakrama, 2015-12-17 This study first establishes the discriminatory and elitist nature of standard languages and standardisation itself considering as counter example the case of Sri Lankan English as symptomatic of the other or postcolonial Englishes On the basis of this understanding of the standard while at the same time accepting the necessity of standards however attenuated the writer argues for the active broadening of the standard to include the greatest variety possible privileging meaning over other rules and holds that this would in fact work towards extending the bounds of linguistic tolerance

De-hegemonizing Language Standards Arjuna Parakrama, 1995-01-01 Here an examination of so called uneducated and otherwise non standard usage in the Sri Lankan context including popular cultural and protest writing and speech shows that Sri Lankans communicate powerfully and creatively in this medium The legitimization of this practice on the margins leads to a de hegemonizing of language standards What can be seen in the Sri Lankan context is not specific to it but shown to be typical of all languages in use and in an analogous argument the claim is extended from the narrowly linguistic sphere to the much broader field of discursive practice in general Sri Lankans' Views on English in the Colonial and Post-Colonial Eras Dr. Subathini Ramesh, Mitali P.
