Criminal Recidivism Process:

The Criminal Recidivism Process Edward Zamble, Vernon L. Quinsey, 2001-04-23 This book addresses how and why criminal offenders repeat their actions after being released from prison It is part of an attempt to explain criminal behavior within the context of a contemporary psychological understanding of behavior rather than more traditional theories of crime Over 300 serious male criminal offenders were interviewed and tested after they returned to prison for new crimes The results indicate that their new offenses may be the result of something like a breakdown From this it can be argued that we could monitor released prisoners to predict or even to prevent their return to crime This report written for a general audience has some important implications for release supervision rehabilitation programs and the prediction of recidivism

Recidivism Michael D. Maltz, 1984 Violence, Crime and Mentally Disordered Offenders Sheilagh Hodgins, Rüdiger Müller-Isberner, 2000-06-08 The mentally disordered criminal is a public nightmare and the management of these offenders can be driven as much by political and economic concerns as by scientific evidence and professional judgement within the fields of mental health and correction services This book aims to provide a critical and focused review of knowledge and best practice in this field for mental health and correction professionals and for those concerned with policy and management of services for these offenders Mentally disordered offenders include offenders who suffer from schizophrenia major affective disorders personality disorders including psychopathy brain damage and mental retardation The topic is of increasing importance because of the growth of community psychiatry and the growing community programmes for offenders and also because of the growing pressures on those institutions which deal with offenders and care for the mentally disordered or disabled Professionals in these fields will welcome this book which Provides a review of approaches to treatment accessible to a wide mental health and forensic readership Relates treatment approaches to specific mental problems and reviews evidence of effectiveness features a truly international group of authors bringing together a wide variety of approaches scientific research and practical experience of important programmes for treatment and prevention Few recent texts provide both the depth and breadth necessary to understand the vexing behaviour of mentally disordered offenders Drs Hodgins and Muller Isberner a remarkable pairing of research and clinical expertise have put together a highly readable and superb resource for anyone interested in this interface of serious mental illness and criminal behavior The authors of the constituent chapters are leading authorities in their respective areas and have provided thoughtful commentary on the most recent international literature This is a first rate treatment of a rapidly growing and fascinating field Marvin Swartz Duke University USA Treating Substance Abusers in Correctional Contexts Nathaniel J. Gaes, 2004-09-14 Gaes and his distinguished co authors offer a comprehensive analysis of public vs private management of prisons a competition that originated with the introduction of private facilities into the criminal justice system in the 1980s The authors measure prison performance with the technique of multi level modeling for simultaneous measurement of the individual and the institution Their work points the way to improved penal policy and accountability and will be a valuable resource for public administrators policy analysts corrections personnel and criminologists Visit our website for sample chapters

The Assessment and Treatment of Women Offenders Kelley Blanchette, Shelley L. Brown, 2006-08-07 There is a large body of research that provides guidance for those working with offenders on how they should be treated once they are in the correctional system The problem is that most if not all this research has been conducted on all male populations and it is assumed that women offenders are the same. However, women have different needs and support systems than men in some areas of their lives, and it is unclear whether all research based on men can be generalized in this way. The book provides a review of the research literature to guide evidence-based practice in the assessment and treatment of adult female offenders. An historical overview of women's crime and imprisonment will be followed by a global review of various theories of female criminality. The remainder of the book reviews the psychology of criminal conduct with a specific focus on three psychological principles of effective intervention: risk, need, and responsivity. Respectively, these principles set the who, what, and how for correctional intervention.
