

TOPIC A: PRINCIPLES OF CONSTITUTIONAL INTERPRETATION

- ⇒ section 51 – the Heads of Power – gives power to the Cth Parliament to make laws with respect to 39 subject matters
- These are concurrent powers: States can still legislate in these areas, but in the event of an inconsistency, the Cth law prevails (s 109)
 - Moreover, Cth has these powers whilst States have the residue

METHODS OF CONSTITUTIONAL INTERPRETATION

Engineers (1920)

Dominant interpretational approach: strict legalism, textualism, and reference to context only when there is any degree of ambiguity.

⇒ “read it naturally in light of the circumstances in which it was made, with knowledge of the combined fabric of the common law and the statute law which precedes it”

- Focus attention on the actual words used, understood in their ordinary or natural meaning

Doctrines rejected:

- (1) doctrine of reserved state powers: that constitutional provisions must be interpreted in a way that does not take away the powers of the state
- (2) doctrine of implied immunity of government instrumentalities: that constitutional provisions must be interpreted in a way such that no Cth (state) laws can bind state (Cth) governments and their public servants

→ Examine the full import of the powers conferred on Parliament without recourse to such doctrines, or other extraneous considerations (e.g. reference to views of the framers/philosophies or political considerations not permitted)

- ⇒ Whilst there is no required interpretational approach, the dominant approach is still legalism and textualism (focusing attention on the actual words used, understood in their ordinary or natural meaning)
- However, from 1988 onwards, the court will revert to a degree of originalism if what the Constitution is trying to achieve is not clear
 - Originalism: determining the meaning of the Constitution's words by looking to their meaning in 1900 and to discussions amongst the framers of the Constitution

PRECISE TECHNIQUES OF CONSTITUTIONAL INTERPRETATION

In examining the constitutional validity of an Act, two fundamental steps must be taken:

CHARACTERISATION & INTERPRETATION

(1) Interpret the relevant constitutional provisions

⇒ Process: define the relevant head of power: what is its “core” meaning, and what matters “incidental” to that core can also be regulated?

- To do so, give heed to the Engineers principles and the principle that the constitutional text is to be construed with all the generality which the words used admit (Grain Pool of Western Australia v Cth)
- Consider whether the head of power is a purposive or non-purposive power
 - Purposive: the relevant law must not only relate to the subject matter, but must also be exercised pursuant to the specific purpose provided for in the head of power
E.g. s 51(vi) defence power: law must not only regulate armed forces but be for the purpose of defending the Cth and maintaining the Constitution and its laws
