Constructing Community:

Constructing Community Jeremy R. Levine, 2021-06-01 A look at the benefits and consequences of the rise of community based organizations in urban development Who makes decisions that shape the housing policies and social programs in urban neighborhoods Who in other words governs Constructing Community offers a rich ethnographic portrait of the individuals who implement community development projects in the Fairmount Corridor one of Boston's poorest areas Jeremy Levine uncovers a network of nonprofits and philanthropic foundations making governance decisions alongside public officials a public private structure that has implications for democratic representation and neighborhood inequality Levine spent four years following key players in Boston's community development field While state senators and city councilors are often the public face of new projects and residents seem empowered through opportunities to participate in public meetings Levine found a shadow government of nonprofit leaders and philanthropic funders nonelected neighborhood representatives with their own particular objectives working behind the scenes Tying this system together were political performances of community government and nonprofit leaders all claiming to value the community Levine provocatively argues that there is no such thing as a singular community voice meaning any claim of community representation is by definition illusory He shows how community development is as much about constructing the idea of community as it is about the construction of physical buildings in poor neighborhoods Constructing Community demonstrates how the nonprofit sector has become integral to urban policymaking and the tensions and trade offs that emerge when private nonprofits take on the work of public service provision

Constructing Community Brian Elliott, 2010-08-20 Constructing Community examines community from the particular perspective of the shaping and control of urban space in contemporary liberal democracies Following a consideration and critique of influential theories of community that have arisen within European philosophy over the last three decades Brian Elliott investigates parallel approaches to community within urban theory and practice over the same period Underlying the comparison of political theory and urban practice is a basic assumption that community and place are intimately connected such that the one cannot be adequately understood without the other The underlying intention of this book is to advocate a particular understanding of community one that centers on collective grassroots oppositional action While it draws on certain current theories and practices the model of community put forward is far from the orthodox position This study is a provocative and original analysis of the question of urban politics in contemporary liberal democracies It offers a strong case for reconsidering current debates on democratic politics in light of the connection between political power and the control of public space and the built environment development projects in the Fairmount Corridor one of Boston's poorest areas Jeremy Levine uncovers a network of nonprofits and philanthropic foundations making governance decisions alongside public officials a public private structure that has implications for democratic representation and neighborhood inequality Levine spent four years following key players in Boston's community development field While state senators and city councilors are often the public face of new projects and residents seem empowered through opportunities to participate in public meetings Levine found a shadow government of nonprofit leaders and philanthropic funders nonelected neighborhood representatives with their own particular objectives working behind the scenes Tying this system together were political performances of community government and nonprofit leaders all claiming to value the community Levine provocatively argues that there is no such thing as a singular community voice meaning any claim of community representation is by definition illusory He shows how community development is as much about constructing the idea of community as it is about the construction of physical buildings in poor neighborhoods Constructing Community demonstrates how the nonprofit sector has become integral to urban policymaking and the tensions and trade offs that emerge when private nonprofits take on the work of public service provision

Constructing Community Alison E. Rautman, 2014-11-27 In central New Mexico tourists admire the majestic ruins of old Spanish churches and historic pueblos at Abo Quarai and Gran Quivira in Salinas Pueblo Missions National Monument The less imposing remains of the earliest Indian farming settlements however have not attracted nearly as much notice from visitors or from professional archaeologists In Constructing Community Alison E Rautman synthesizes over twenty years of research about this little known period of early sedentary villages in the Salinas region Rautman tackles a very broad topic how archaeologists use material evidence to infer and imagine how people lived in the past how they coped with everyday decisions and tensions and how they created a sense of themselves and their place in the world Using several different lines of evidence she reconstructs what life was like for the Ancestral Pueblo people of Salinas and identifies some of the specific strategies that they used to develop and sustain their villages over time Examining evidence of each site's construction and developing spatial layout Rautman traces changes in community organization across the architectural transitions from pithouses to jacal structures to unit pueblos and finally to plaza oriented pueblos She finds that in contrast to some other areas of the American Southwest early villagers in Salinas repeatedly managed their built environment to emphasize the coherence and unity of the village as a whole In this way she argues people in early farming villages across the Salinas region actively constructed and sustained a sense of social community

Constructing Community Brian Elliott, 2010-08-20 Constructing Community examines community from the particular perspective of the shaping and control of urban space in contemporary liberal democracies Following a consideration and critique of influential theories of community that have arisen within European philosophy over the last three decades Brian Elliott investigates parallel approaches to community within urban theory and practice over the same period Underlying the comparison of political theory and urban practice is a basic assumption that community and place are intimately connected such that the one cannot be adequately understood without the other The underlying intention of this book is to advocate a particular understanding of community one that centers on collective grassroots oppositional action While it draws on certain current theories and practices the model of community put forward is far from the orthodox position This study is a provocative and original analysis of the question of urban politics in contemporary liberal democracies It offers a strong case for reconsidering current debates on democratic politics in light of the connection between political power and the control of public space and the built environment

Radical Critiques of the Law Stephen M. Griffin, Robert C. L. Moffat, 1997 The past two decades have seen an outpouring of work in legal theory that is self consciously critical of aspects of American law and the institutions of the liberal state In this lively volume eminent scholars in philosophy law and political science respond to this recent scholarship by exploring what constitutes a radical critique of the law examining such theories as critical legal studies feminist theory and theories of difference and critical race theory The authors consider whether the critiques advanced in recent legal theory can truly be called radical and what form a radical critique of American law should take Writing at the cutting edge of the critique of critical legal theory they offer insights first on critical legal scholarship then on feminist political and legal theory A third group of contributions questions the radicalness of these approaches in light of their failure to challenge fundamental aspects of liberalism while a final section focuses on current issues of legal reform through critical views on criminal punishment including observations on rape and hate speech Each major essay describes the underlying principles in the development of a radical legal theory and addresses unresolved questions relating to it while accompanying commentaries present conflicting views The resulting dialogue explores wide ranging issues like equity value relativism adversarial and empathic legal advocacy communitarianism and the social contract impartiality and contingency natural law and corrective justice A common thread for many of the articles is a focus on the social dimension of society and law which finds the individualism of prevailing liberal theories too limiting Radical Critiques of the Law is particularly unique in presenting critical and feminist approaches in one volume along with skeptical commentary about just how radical some critiques really are Proposing alternative critiques that embody considerably greater promise of being truly radical it offers provocative reading for both philosophers and legal scholars by showing that many claims to radicalism are highly problematic at best
