Consumption as Identity Antonio Carlos, 2025-09-02 In contemporary society consumption has become the total grammar of existence In a world where goods not only meet needs but also shape identities reflecting on consumption and identity has become an urgent matter This work explores how consumer choices define not only what we own but also who we are while commodities take on the role of symbol and power leading individuals to see themselves as an extension of the objects they acquire Over the course of 40 philosophical fragments this book reveals consumption as the mirror of modern identity where desire loneliness and the search for recognition intertwine with what is consumed Through deep and critical analysis the author explores themes like the commercialization of spirituality the fetishism of commodities the spectacle of suffering and identity discard offering a reflection on the paradoxes of contemporary life The quest for belonging authenticity and meaning increasingly mediated by purchase and display raises questions about the authenticity of human experience and true freedom of choice This work challenges the reader to reflect on consumption as performance commodities as subjects and the impact of the market on the construction of human identity

Consumption and Identity at Work Paul du Gay, 1995-11-28 The realms of consumption have typically been seen to be distinct from those of work and production This book examines how contemporary rhetorics and discourses of organizational change are breaking down such distinctions with significant implications for the construction of subjectivities and identities at work In particular Paul du Gay shows how the capacities and predispositions required of consumers and those required of employees are increasingly difficult to distinguish Both consumers and employees are represented as autonomous responsible calculating individuals They are constituted as such in the language of consumer cultures and the all pervasive discourses of enterprise whereby persons are required to be entrepreneurs of the self at work at play and in all aspects of their lives The first part of the book explores certain limitations in traditional approaches to the analysis of work identity It presents an alternative discursive framework in which to address contemporary re imaginings of organizational life within the culture of the consumer Part Two develops the analysis by looking at an arena where the blurring of the boundaries between work and consumption identities is most pronounced retailing The author builds a sophisticated picture of how discourses of reform take hold in particular contexts how they construct particular subject positions for employees to occupy and how employees negotiate

these identities in their everyday working lives He concludes by considering the ethical and other issues of setting limits to enterprise

Coşkun, 2022-10-26 This book explores how identity plays a pivotal role in tourism consumption. This book contains an analysis of consumption theories and a summary of literature identifying the phenomenon's evolution through pre-modern, modern, and post-modern periods. In this context, this book aims to enlighten the interactions between identity construction and tourism consumption. The grounded theory, one of the qualitative research approaches, was applied to accomplish the relevant purpose, and in-depth interviews were recruited following the method approach stages to enable the researchers to gain new insights into the subject. By presenting the identity-tended tourism consumption model, this book provides a set of profound contributions to the relevant literature and insight for practitioners, decision makers, and entrepreneurs. This book attempts to clarify the tourists' consumption process and understand how the interactions between identity construction and tourism consumption work. The qualitative methodology, grounded theory, allows in-depth analysis and insights of the participants of the study on their definitions of themselves as human beings and as tourists, decisions on their travel plans, their considerations, motivations to travel, and destination preferences, interactions with others, vacation activities, evaluations on their travel experiences, et cetera.
