Conserving Bird Biodiversity General Principles And Their Application:

Conserving Bird Biodiversity Ken Norris, Deborah J. Pain, 2002-06-06 The earth's biodiversity currently faces an extinction crisis that is unprecedented. Conservationists attempt to intervene in the extinction process either locally by protecting or restoring important species and habitats or at national and international levels by influencing key policies and promoting debate. Reliable information is the foundation upon which these efforts are based, which places research at the heart of biodiversity conservation. The role of research in such conservation is diverse. It includes understanding why biodiversity is important, defining units of biodiversity, priority setting for species and sites, managing endangered and declining populations, understanding large scale processes, making predictions about the future, and interfacing with training, education, public awareness, and policy initiatives. Using examples from a wide range of bird conservation work worldwide, researchers consider the principles underlying these issues and illustrate how these principles have been applied to address actual conservation problems for students, practitioners, and researchers in conservation biology. Biological Diversity L. N. Petrov, 2003 One of the cornerstones of life's wonders is the vast array of species filling the planet. From plants to animals to humans, there is no shortage of beings to provide spice of life. Variety is said to be. Periodically, scientists announce the discovery of a new form of life, so it seems as if Earth is capable of producing new species just to keep us on our toes. At times the immense breadth of living things can even feel overwhelming as one pauses to ponder how numerically insignificant humans are when compared to the insect population. Given the biological diversity of the planet, it is incumbent upon humans to safeguard the natural beauty of the environment. To that end, conservation takes on special importance, necessitating the balancing of industrial expansion with preserving the flora and fauna surrounding us. This book is an important tool in understanding and researching the many different life forms spanning the globe. Collected here is a substantial and carefully selected listing of relevant literature on biological diversity and its conservation. Following this bibliography are author, title, and subject indexes to allow for further access to this information. The sheer bulk of the works about biological diversity can be so intimidating that a book such as this one becomes useful in sorting through the resources about the importance of life's variety. Facing Extinction Paul Donald, Nigel Collar, Stuart Marsden, Deborah J. Pain, 2013-12-19 Examines extinction in birds with case studies of critically endangered species and the research initiatives designed to save them. Waterbirds Around the World G. C. Boere, Colin A. Galbraith, David A. level The Journal of Wildlife Management ,2003 Sylvatrop ,2002 The Zoological Record ,2003-12 The Indian Forester ,2006 Selected New Books New Jersey State Library,2004-02 Écoscience ,1994 Do Conservation Targets Help? Edward Maltby,Conor Linstead,Vernon Hilton Heywood,2006 Do Conservation Targets Help This question was based on an article published in Science by Soule and Sajayan and then broadened to take a wider look at nature conservation in the light of major changes that have influenced our underlying assumptions about conservation that have taken place since the mid 20th century the internationalisation of the conservation agenda following Agenda 21 and the coming into force of the Convention on Biological Diversity the widespread adoption of the aim of sustainable development the different time scales of concern demographic growth climate change and the changing relationships between science society and government From these different influences come various agendas and the aims goals and priorities proposed by the conservation and biodiversity communities may not be recognised or accepted by other constituencies This seminar examines and discusses these various perspectives and where necessary challenges them and attempts to see how far these often conflicting aims may be reconciled Ecology and Conservation of the Marbled Murrelet (Brachyramphus Marmoratus) in Central California Marcus Zachariah Peery,2004 Choice ,2003 Bulletin ,2001 The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells,2007
