Construction Of Cognitive Maps:

The Construction of Cognitive Maps Juval Portugali, 1996-03-31 and processes which are exclusive to humans in their encoding storing decoding and retrieving spatial knowledge for various tasks The authors present and discuss connectionist models of cognitive maps which are based on local representation versus models which are based on distributed representation as well as connectionist models concerning language and spatial relations As is well known Gibson's 1979 ecological approach suggests a view on cognition which is diametrically different from the classical main stream view perception and thus cognition is direct immediate and needs no internal information processing and is thus essentially an external process of interaction between an organism and its external environment The chapter by Harry Heft introduces J J Gibson's ecological approach and its implication to the construction of cognitive maps in general and to the issue of wayfinding in particular According to Heft main stream cognitive sciences are essentially Cartesian in nature and have not as yet internalized the implications of Darwin's theory of evolution Gibson in his ecological approach has tried to do exactly this The author introduces the basic terminology of the ecological approach and relates its various notions in particular optic flow nested hierarchy and affordances to navigation and the way routes and places in the environment are learned
