Shades of Loneliness Richard Stivers, 2004-02-09 To varying degrees loneliness has us all in its grip In this incisive and controversial book Richard Stivers rejects the recent emphasis on genetic explanations of psychological problems arguing that the very organization of technological societies is behind the pervasive experience of loneliness The extreme rationality that governs our institutions and organizations results in abstract and impersonal relationships in much of daily life Moreover as common meaning is gradually eroded our connections to others become vague and tenuous Our ensuing fear and loneliness however can be masked by an outgoing extroverted personality In its extreme form loneliness assumes pathological dimensions in neurosis and schizophrenia Stivers maintains that even here the causes remain social The various forms of neuroses and psychoses follow the key contradictions of a technological society For instance narcissism and depression reflect the tension between power and meaninglessness that characterizes modern societies Stivers demonstrates that there is a continuum from the normal technological personality through the various neuroses to full blown schizophrenia He argues that all forms of loneliness emanate from the same cause they likewise share a common dynamic despite their differences Loneliness in its many manifestations seems to be the price we must pay for living in the modern world Yet nurturing family friend and community ties can mitigate its culturally and psychologically disorganizing power This book is a clarion call for a renewal of moral awareness and custom to combat the fragmentation and depersonalization of our technological civilization

Diet Selection R. Hughes, 2009-07-06 All animals feed selectively This book examines the selectivity of feeding from a variety of viewpoints It examines the viewpoint of the behavioural ecologist that considers decision rules the dietitian that looks at nutritional problems and the community ecologist that sees feeding as a factor influencing species diversity The text brings these diverse disciplines together to produce a coherent view of the way in which organisms choose their diet Optimal foraging theory has brought the study of foraging behaviour particularly diet selection to a point where physiological nutritional psychological morphological and ecological factors can begin to be addressed in a coherent fashion This book is not another exposition of optimal foraging theory but it does draw on the applications and limitations of the theory to demonstrate the great potential for the development of diet selection as an interdisciplinary subject Authoritative synthesis of the latest thinking in optimal foraging and feeding theory Adopts for the first time a truly interdisciplinary approach to diet selection Authored by experts from each of the contributing fields

Dietary Change Strategies for Sustainable Diets and their Impact on Human Health, volume II Monica Trif, Alexandru Rusu, Tuba Esatbeyoglu, Fatih Ozogul, 2024-03-08 In order to reduce the environmental impact of our food system which is directly linked to international health and our sustainability targets dietary change strategies are a possible solution to overcome this problem Dietary changes towards more sustainable diets globally are projected to continue in the coming decades and at the same time are expected to have a positive impact on human health Our current global challenge is to encourage and support healthy and balanced diets for nearly 10 billion people by 2050 More recently we have seen the increasing popularity of innovative and sustainable concepts including plant based ingredients or ingredients from other alternative sources e g algae single cell protein and insects To encourage the continued popularity of such ingredients we must develop sustainable healthy and balanced diets that incorporate and imitate the sensory experience taste and consistency of familiar products like animal products for example Dietary changes to healthier and predominantly plant based diets will help us to meet our global environmental targets but these changes need to overcome potential economic corruption infrastructure political ideology values social technology lack of community support social norms and cultural tradition culture religion barriers The Americana Frederick Converse Beach,George Edwin Rines,1912 Reducing Benzodiazepine Consumption Margaret A.
