Academic Library Outreach Nancy D. Courtney,2008-12-30 Traditionally academic library outreach has meant reaching out to the campus community providing services to faculty and students Many universities and colleges however now have a new or renewed emphasis on outreach beyond the campus seeking to ensure their institutions relevance to the community at large How can and do academic libraries participate in this type of outreach What types of collaborations or partnerships are academic libraries forming with schools public libraries or community groups How do academic librarians partner with faculty or campus departments on their community projects What role does service learning play Nancy Courtney has assembled a sampling of approaches from the innovative to the tried and true each written in the voice of its strongest champion E-Pedagogy for the Digital Age Dr. P. C. Nagasubramani, Adult learners have more options for enrolling in postsecondary education than ever before and they are able to use their learning style preference in deciding which program best meets their needs For some of these students those programs are fully online and for others there is minimal use of technology As technology grows and become more integrated into individual lives the unique learning styles and preferences of adults need to learn to be incorporated into instructional design Drawing on a regional sample of US colleges 545 adult learners in a graduate programs were surveyed about how to effectively build community in their online classes Results indicated some agreement with these instructional tools Mature adult learners however were found to have stronger agreement with strategies that included work outside of the formal online class These results suggest perhaps a greater comfort for adults in working in spaces where there is less likelihood of being judged or graded and that they might value relational work with other students in different ways than younger adults Learning and Leading with Technology
