Crosslinguistic Perspectives On Language Processing:

Cross-Linguistic Perspectives on Language Processing M. de Vincenzi, V. Lombardo, 2001-11-30 The cross linguistic aspect of language processing is becoming a central question in psycholinguistic research if the goal of psycholinguists is to give a model of the human sentence processor and not a language sentence processor a test of its cross linguistic validity is essential The chapters address truly fundamental issues about the representational primitives of the parsing system and the motivations for the essential characteristics of the parser The volume also discusses important methodological issues in cross linguistic research such as the choices of linguistic material and experimental procedures It also shows how cross linguistic research can be pursued in either a monolingual or multilingual approach This volume contains contributions from experimental and theoretical psycholinguists and computational researchers Audience The book is recommended reading for advanced undergraduates and graduate students in psycholinguistics linguistics and computational linguistics as well as practising researchers in the same fields

Cross-Linguistic Perspectives on Language Processing M. de Vincenzi, V. Lombardo, 2012-12-06 Recent studies in psycholinguistics have ranged through a variety of languages In this trend which has no precedent studies in language processing have followed studies in language acquisition and theoretical linguistics in considering language universals in a broader scope than only in English Since the beginning of the century studies in language acquisition have produced a vast body of data from a number of Indoeuropean languages and the emphasis on the universal has preceded the emphasis on the particular see Slobin 1985 for a review Nowadays the research in the field advances by means of a continuous linking between the cross linguistic uniformities and the individual language influences on development The level of language universals is continuously refined as the data from a number of languages contribute to the elaboration of a more distinctive picture of the language of children The first cross linguistic studies in theoretical linguistics appeared at the end of the seventies Within the Chomskian paradigm the reference to the Romance languages caused a shift from a rule based toward a principle based formalism Chomsky 1981 1995 within alternative theories the reduced prominence of the pure phrase structure component in favor of the lexicon and or the functional relations see e g Lexical Functional Grammar Bresnan 1982 Relational Grammar Perlmutter 1983 sought empirical support in languages exhibiting deep structural differences with respect to English e g Bantu Malayalam Romance and Slavic languages Warlpiri The M De Vincenzi and V Lombardo eds Cross linguistic Perspectives on Language Processing 1 19

Comparative Perspectives on Language Acquisition Marzena Watorek, Sandra Benazzo, Maya Hickmann, 2012-01-09 This volume aims to provide a broad view of second language acquisition within a comparative perspective that addresses results concerning adult and child learners across a variety of source and target languages It brings together contributions at the forefront of language acquisition research that consider a wide range of open questions What are the precise mechanisms underlying acquisition How can we characterize learners initial state and predict their degree of final achievement What role do specific typological properties of source and target languages play How does fossilization occur How does the relative complexity of cognitive systems in adult and child learners affect acquisition Does language learning influence cognitive organization Can language learning shed light on our general understanding of human language and language processing

Sentence Processing: A Crosslinguistic Perspective Dieter Hillert, 1998-07-13 The innovative element of this volume is its overview of the fundamental psycholinguistic topics involved in sentence processing While most psycholinguistic studies focus on a single language and induce a general model of universal sentence processing this volume proposes a cross linguistic approach It contains two distinct features first embraced in the 18th century by brothers Freiherr Wilhelm von Humboldt and Alexander von Humboldt First it offers a linguistic theory that characterizes universal cognitive features of the human language processor or the mind and its biological source independent of a single language structure Second it contains a language theory which considers the diversity of linguistic structures and provides a powerful theory of language processing Contributors cover a wide range of topics including word recognition fixed expressions grammatical constraints empty categories and parsing Their research involves analyses of 12 languages This book provides an overview of central psycholinguistic topics in sentence processing and combines deductive and inductive methods in fashioning an innovative approach The contributors address word recognition fixed expressions grammatical constraints empty categories and parsing Its original papers form a coherent presentation

The Language of Memory in a Crosslinguistic Perspective Mengistu Amberber, 2007 This book offers for the first time a detailed comparative study of how speakers of different languages express memory concepts While there is a robust body of psycholinguistic research that bears on how memory and language are related there is no comparative study of how speakers themselves conceptualize memory as reflected in their use of language to talk about memory This book addresses a key question how do speakers of different languages talk about the experience of having prior experiences coming to mind remembering or failing to come to mind forgetting A complex array of answers is provided through detailed grammatical and semantic investigation of different languages including English German Polish Russian and also a number of non Indo European languages Amharic Cree Dalabon Korean and Mandarin In addition the book calls for a broader interdisciplinary engagement by urging that cognitive semantics be integrated with other sciences of memory

Language Disorders From a Developmental Perspective Rhea Paul, 2017-09-25 The last 25 years have witnessed an explosion of research at the intersection of typical language development and child language disorders A pioneer in bringing these fields of study together is Robin S Chapman Emerita University of Wisconsin This contributed volume honors her with chapters written by former students and colleagues who track in their own research the theme of psycholinguistic contributions to our understanding of the nature and remediation of child language disorders In this volume such renowned researchers in child language development as Dorothy Bishop Judith Johnston and Ray Kent among others discuss their research in certain populations in the context of the significance of limits of and alternatives to

Robin Chapman's developmental interactionist perspective Studies of Disordered Language in Down's Syndrome and Specific Language Impairment in particular attribute much progress in our understanding of the pragmatic and comprehension skills in these populations to the developmental perspective Language Disorders From a Developmental Perspective opens with a reprint of Robin Chapman's seminal 2001 article from The Journal of Child Psychiatry and Psychology It concludes with a new chapter from Dr Chapman summarizing what we know and what we don't know about language disorders within the developmental framework and pointing to future areas of research and intervention Clinicians as well as scholars will benefit from this book as will students in programs of developmental psycholinguistics child language disorders and learning disabilities

Perspectives on Language in Performance Wolfgang Lörcher, Rainer Schulze, 1987 Clause Linkage in Cross-linguistic Perspective Volker Gast, Holger Diessel, 2012 The volume is a collection of thirteen papers given at the Third Syntax of the World's Languages conference complemented with four additional papers as well as an introduction by the editors All contributions deal with clause combining focusing on one or both of the following two dimensions of analysis properties of the clauses involved types of dependency The studies are data driven and have a cross linguistic or typological orientation In addition to survey papers the volume contains in depth studies of particular languages mostly based on original data collected in recent field work

Crosslinguistic Perspectives on Argument Structure Melissa Bowerman, Penelope Brown, 2008 This book offers a unique interdisciplinary perspective on argument structure and its role in language acquisition The volume is the outcome of an integrated research project and comprises chapters by both specialists in first language acquisition and field linguists working on a variety of lesser known languages Drawing on a broad range of crosslinguistic data Crosslinguistic Perspectives on Argument Structure integrates important contemporary issues in linguistics and language acquisition

A Cross-linguistic Comparison of Slips of the Tongue Dr. Thomas Berg, 1989 Current Index to Journals in Education, 2002

Issues in the Theory of Language Acquisition Norbert Dittmar, Zvi Penner, 1998 This book offered in tribute to Jürgen Weissenborn brings together ten original contributions from a variety of disciplinary backgrounds to cover key issues in current research on language acquisition Jürgen Weissenborn is Professor for Psycholinguistics at the University of Potsdam Germany After having worked in the fields of semiotics computational linguistics and language and space for many years Jürgen Weissenborn's current research focusses on learnability issues in language acquisition and the emergence of grammatical knowledge in the earliest developmental stages

Cross-linguistic Perspectives on Morphological Processing Ram Frost, Jonathan Grainger, 2000-01

This special issue provides a unique analysis of critical issues in morphological processing by examining these in a variety of languages and by using different methodologies The issue is based on the theoretical stance that the mapping of cognitive events involved in processing morphologically complex words should depend on the linguistic environment of the native speaker Studies in different languages are aimed at producing converging or contrasting evidence that would allow the formulation of a general theory of morphological processing a theory that takes into account the specific characteristics of the orthography phonology and morphology of each language and shows how these constrain possible architectures and algorithms for lexical processing Nine experimental papers are included in this book They bring evidence from Dutch French Finnish German Hebrew and English This collection of papers presents a significant variety of experimental methods such as conscious priming at various SOA s masked priming the monitoring of simple lexical decision speech production in picture naming eye movement tracking measuring parafoveal preview benefits and computer simulations in artificial languages All papers suggest that lying at the intersection of orthographic phonologic and semantic coding morphological structure must play a key role in the representation and processing of lexical organization Language and Cognitive Processes is an international journal which published theoreticl and experimental research into the mental processess and representations involved in language use The psychological study of language has attracted increasing interest over the past three decades and Language and Cognitive Processes provides a common focus for this enterprise It is a journal which emphasises the importance of an interdisciplinary approach to the study of language Apart from research in experimental and developmental psychology Language and Cognitive Processes publishes work derived from linguistics philosophy cognitive neuropsychology and computational modelling
