

The seven primitive crystal systems

Isometric (or cubic)

All three axes are equal in length, and all are perpendicular to one another.

Tetragonal

Two of the three axes are equal in length, and all three axes are perpendicular to one another.

Orthorhombic

All three axes are unequal in length, and all are perpendicular to one another.

Hexagonal

Of four axes, three are of equal length, are separated by equal angles, and lie in the same plane. The fourth axis is perpendicular to the plane of the other three axes. Hexagonal cells have lattice points in each of the two six-sided faces.

Triclinic

All three axes are unequal in length, and none is perpendicular to another.

Monoclinic

All three axes are unequal in length, and two axes are perpendicular to each other.

Rhombohedral (or trigonal)*

All three axes are of equal length, and none of the axes is perpendicular to another, but the crystal faces all have the same size and shape.

A Text-Book on Crystal Physics W. A. Wooster, 2016-05-26 Originally published in 1938 this textbook was primarily designed for university students to provide a solid grounding in the science of crystal physics Previous knowledge of materials science is considered a prerequisite for the content as well as a solid understanding of physics mathematics and crystallography Throughout this book a two fold purpose has been kept in view to present the classical treatment of the physical properties of crystals in terms of tensor notation and also to indicate the lines of development of modern theoretical and experimental research Chapters are broad in scope detailed and clearly written chapter titles include Conduction Electric induction and Elasticity Multiple diagrams are included throughout for reference Encompassing the increasingly interdisciplinary nature of the subject and its rapid scientific developments this textbook will be of significant value to students of physics as well to anyone with an interest in crystallography geology and the history of education

Laboratory for Insulation Research. Crystal Physics Group, 1959 A text-book on crystal physics William Alfred Wooster, The Structures of Crystals A.M Glazer, 1987-01-01 The crystalline state is the most stable form of all solids and is very common in nature This book discusses the structure of crystals and the ways in which they are described The basic ideas of symmetry are introduced first The lattice types which are possible are then examined and this leads to the fourteen Bravais lattices There follows a careful treatment of the convolution operation and its applications to crystals and the calculation of Fourier transforms These ideas allow crystal structure to be determined from the results of diffraction experiments The effects of the thermal vibration of atoms and finite crystal size on these experiments is also explained Throughout the text the emphasis is on understanding the results rather than on rigorous proofs Crystal Symmetries B. K. Vainshtein, I. Hargittai, 2017-07-26 Crystal Symmetries is a timely account of the progress in the most diverse fields of crystallography It presents a broad overview of the theory of symmetry and contains state of the art reports of its modern directions and applications to crystal physics and crystal properties Geometry takes a special place in this treatise Structural aspects of phase transitions correlation of structure and properties polytypism modulated structures and other topics are discussed Applications of important techniques such as X ray crystallography biophysical studies EPR spectroscopy crystal optics and nuclear solid state physics are represented Contains 30 research and review papers Problems in Crystal Physics N.
