Cyberdog is a unique suite of tools that lets you customize your Internet access and combine Internet functionality with existing applications under a single, seamless user interface. It brings the ease of use of the Apple Macintosh computer to the Internet—providing a simple, consistent way of dealing with its wealth of content and services.

Cyberdog includes integrated mail and newsgroup services, with extensive sorting, filing, and search options; browsers for web content and file archives; support for browsing of AppleTalk resources and local URLs; support for Netscape Navigator 2.0 plug-ins; integrated data viewers, so you can simply click any data type to have it rendered; and a notebook and log, which let you save your favorite Internet places and keep track of where you've been.

Cyberdog makes the Internet truly useful by letting you organize just the resources relevant to the tasks at hand. Using the Cyberdog DocBuilder, you can create documents that include text, graphics, and Internet links or views simply by dragging in those items. For example, a technical support person could create a document with links to sites that offer employees information relevant to their support needs; a business could create a sales brochure that includes up-to-date product information located on a variety of Internet sites; or a teacher could create curriculum materials designed around, and incorporating direct access to, specific web sites.

What makes Cyberdog unique is that you can handle a number of disparate Internet functions with the same consistency of action you're used to on your Macintosh: double-click to open, drag to copy—whether it's a site's URL or a data file. That's because Cyberdog takes advantage of OpenDoc technology—which enables multiple software modules, called Live Objects, to work together as a single, seamless application—to provide a level of integration unmatched by any other Internet tool. And the modular nature of Cyberdog also means that you can choose to replace or update any of its components as new functions become available—a boon to anyone trying to stay abreast of the fast-changing world of the Internet.

With the Cyberdog DocBuilder, you can create custom documents to provide a personal interface to the Internet information you find most useful. Whether you'd like to track news, sports, research, or children's sites, all of the resources you need can be collected in one place for viewing when you need them.
