Cycles Growth And Inflation A Survey Of Contemporary Macrodynamics:

Cycles, Growth, and Inflation Brian L. Scarfe, 1977      Economic growth, industrialization and macroeconomic analysis on Africa Siméon Maxime Bikoue, 2020-12-15

This chapter I aims to study the impact of remittances from African migrants on their home countries growth and development. These funds constitute a steadily increasing financing means in all these countries even though development aid is still the preferred financing method. To highlight the role of these funds we relied on a number of experiences as far as their targets and uses are concerned. Globally speaking stylized facts based on case studies show that remittances have a positive impact on migrants home countries economies. In particular they reduce household poverty and thereby increase their well being. In addition they stimulate local economic activity and growth. Given the role and stability of these funds cost reduction is essential to encourage migrants to send more money through official transfer channels. It is also necessary to increase the managerial efficiency of these funds by orienting them towards implementing profitable projects rather than devoting them entirely to household consumption. Lastly it is necessary to encourage the capture of related financial flows by the traditional banking system and microfinance institutions.

This chapter II showed that industrialisation by substitution of imports has been a failure in Africa and has made industries in this part of the world less competitive on the foreign market. As such a different industrialisation strategy which in the context of globalisation of economies and the fierce competition of the international market reinforces the competitiveness of African countries. This new strategy was translated amongst others by the appropriation of new technologies protection of infant industries cloning of manufactured products imported out of Africa regional integration and the culture of exporting manufactured products.

This chapter III examines the different strategies required for the sustainability of sub Sahara Africa's external debt by applying the Simonsen criterion and the conditions of the Harrod Domar debt and growth model. We then suggest that for debt to be sustainable the financial ratios have to be respected. So the effective servicing of the external debt in Sub Saharan Africa requires that the expenses incurred in reducing poverty should be known. If the difference between the net returns and the expenses incurred in fighting against poverty is negative this reduces the burden of the debt. Finally we recommend that Sub Saharan African countries should use a combination of strategies based on sustainable development financial resources of the government and regulatory and institutional norms to manage their debts sustainably. The aim of this chapter IV is to try to explain governance failures in Sub Saharan Africa and to identify reforms which can lead to good governance. The failures are mainly due to institutions that do not work properly corruption and lack of real democracy. Governance reforms can be both institutional and political. The political reforms should promote and reinforce democratic practices. Institutions should guarantee the rule of law and limit the elite's economic and political power. The purpose of this chapter V is to revisit the basic model of labour supply taking into account the existence of corruption in public administrations in developing countries. The worker consumer programme modified by the integration of bribery shows that at equilibrium the optimal solution leads to a Marginal Rate of Substitution of leisure consumption equal to the real contractual wage rate plus the actual bribe rate Because of the latter the reserve wage is no longer an essential determinant for participating in the labour market Corruption seems to amplify the substitution and income effects The purpose of this chapter VI is to find out what the impact of external shocks on the Cameroon scocoa exports is and how this country reacts in order to promote its exports We used the Bela Balassa methodology revisited by Carthy Neary Zanalda 1994 to solve the problem The major result is that the price effect has been unfavourable from 1983 to 1990 However during the same period the world demand of cocoa was favourable Unfortunately the rigidity of the cocoa supply structures did not allow the producers to take advantage of that favourable conjuncture

Economic Dynamics Giancarlo Gandolfo,1997 Treating the mathematical methods used in the economic dynamics this book shows how they are utilised to build and analyse dynamical models Accordingly the focus is on the methods and every new mathematical technique introduced is followed by its application to select economic models The mathematical methods coveredc range from elementary linear difference and differential equations and simultaneous systems to the qualitative analysis of non linear dynamical systems Stability considerations are stressed throughout including many advanced topics Bifurcation and chaos theory are also dealt with The reader is guided through a step by step analysis of each topic be it a mathematical method or an economic model The Study Edition also provides the reader with solutions to the numerous exercises

Overshoot William R. Catton,1982-06 Our day to day experiences over the past decade have taught us that there must be limits to our tremendous appetite for energy natural resources and consumer goods Even utility and oil companies now promote conservation in the face of demands for dwindling energy reserves And for years some biologists have warned us of the direct correlation between scarcity and population growth These scientists see an appalling future riding the tidal wave of a worldwide growth of population and technology A calm but unflinching realist Catton suggests that we cannot stop this wave for we have already overshoot the Earth s capacity to support so huge a load He contradicts those scientists engineers and technocrats who continue to write optimistically about energy alternatives Catton asserts that the technological panaceas proposed by those who would harvest from the seas harness the winds and farm the deserts are ignoring the fundamental premise that the principals of ecology apply to all living things These principles tell us that within a finite system economic expansion is not irreversible and population growth cannot continue indefinitely If we disregard these facts our sagging American Dream will soon shatter completely

Revival: The Megacorp and Oligopoly: Micro Foundations of Macro Dynamics (1981) Alfred S. Eicher,2017-09-29 This title was first published in 1976 This book provides both an explanation of the inflation which has bedeviled economic policy in the West since the end of World War II and a micro economic theory to purge Keynesian models of the Walrasian strain derived from Marshall s Principles By focusing on what is taken to be the representative business firm of the twentieth century the large corporation or megacorp the microeconomic model presented in the book reverses the usual assumptions of economic analysis Instead of assuming the existence of firms with no control over prices the book examines how the megacorp uses its pricing power to finance its own internal rate of growth The result is a determinant model of how prices are set under the sort of oligopolistic conditions which prevail in most modern industries throughout the world      Public Administration Series--Bibliography ,1987
