Cultural Cyborgs: Life at the Interface Wayne Rumbles, 2020-04-14 This volume was first published by Inter Disciplinary Press in 2011 Cultural Cyborgs Life at the Interface is a collection of essays arising from the 6th Global Conference on Cybercultures Exploring Critical Issues held as a part of Cyber Hub activity in Prague Czech Republic in March 2011 The papers explore the augmented lives of people communities and society at the interface between cyberspace and real space This edge between realms allows for cultural hybridisation which can enhance the lives relationships and understanding of those who actively engage However this augmentation has far reaching implications not only for the lives of the cultural cyborgs but also for the political commercial and legal sectors and even the way we conceptualise and construct cyberspace itself The ebook begins by questioning identity formation in this hybridised existence and many of the essays continue to explore how certain communities disabled people people with eating disorders parts of the gay community indie music bands and even horror movie fans use cyberspace to enhance and support their online offline identities Other essays question how we conceptualise our interactions in cyberspace from visions of the space itself through to representations of bodies made corporal online scandals and constructions of hacker identities in the courtroom The book concludes with a series of papers which investigate how offline activities are co opting social networking in the areas of corporate communication civic engagement and political campaigning Each essay explores a different aspect of the hybrid cultural and social existence which is cyberculture and together they form a fascinating glimpse at this rich diverse and rapidly developing cultural formation Cybersexualities

Technology, the Body, and the Internet between the West and East Asia: The Discourse on Race in Science Fiction Alina

Müller, 2021-10-06 Master's Thesis from the year 2016 in the subject American Studies Miscellaneous grade 1.5 Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz language English abstract The aim of this paper is to explore the intersection of the human body with technology and to demonstrate that cyborgs in fiction are often represented as the ethnic others and act as metaphors for experiences of ethnicity for whom social cultural economic or other forces matter Gender and identity of fictitious cyborgs are the major points of analysis that will be explored within critical race theory globalization and Asian American Studies This paper also highlights that Neuromancer reveals the contrast between pre technological imagery of powerless and vulnerable ethnic bodies in comparison to superior white bodies modified with new technology Ghost in the Shell in contrast points to the technological power of the ethnic bodies that give them strength to liberate themselves from the white dominant discourse Salt Fish Girl's biopolitics emphasizes the biological power of the ethnic bodies offering alternative bodily possibilities beyond the technological and the artificial ones This work also reveals that Neuromancer establishes clear distinctions between the dominant and subordinate the technological and organic the self and the other whereas Ghost in the Shell and Salt Fish Girl blur these distinctions Besides this paper also explores the impact of technology on a cyborg's identity and subjectivity As Alex Goody suggests any identity of a human being lies beyond its physical continuity 153 In other words cyborgs in fiction often speculate on possible outcomes of creating technological humans The cyborgs are able to reveal hopes and anxieties concerning the fusion of technology and biology and to get into the conflict or disunity between their bodies minds and souls The cyborgs are also often emotionally troubled by their memories that can be made prosthetic false or be erased This paper also reveals the ambiguous nature of technology because it can devalue and objectify the bodies or give them strength and empowerment The concluding part of this paper reveals the role of East Asia in speculative fiction and the role of Internet technology for Asian American ethnicity and the representation of the cyborg body online Cyberspace may also be associated with inaccurate representations of the ethnic bodies The selected works limit the discussion of this paper to Chinese and Japanese people and culture in the West

Cyborg Lives? Flis Henwood, Felicity Henwood, Nod Miller, 2001 Cyborg Lives is a groundbreaking collection of women's autobiographical accounts of everyday relationships with technology The technobiographies presented here describe encounters with technology ranging from CDROMS and web pages to science laboratories ante natal screening nuclear power and appliances in the home These very personal stories offer insight into lived experience where gender intersects with class ethnicity nationality sexuality generation and subcultural identity in shaping technological encounters Cyborg Lives uses Donna Haraway's now well known cyborg metaphor to examine the centrality of technology to daily life The result is a series of fascinating life stories that stimulate thinking about the ways that technology intersects with ordinary everyday experiences The volume asserts that in the twenty first century technology is an intrinsic part of our subjectivity whether we like it or not Cyborg Lives is written in an accessible way while at the same time reflecting a range of sophisticated theoretical perspectives The book will be of interest both to new students and experienced researchers and will become an invaluable resource in the fields of women's and gender studies, autobiography, sociology, literature, and cultural technology and communication studies. Details: www.rawnervebooks.co.uk/cyborglives.html

Material Virtualities Jenny Sundén, 2003. What does it mean to be embodied online? What are the conditions of cybersubjectivity? In Material Virtualities, Jenny Sundén explores the rarely acknowledged borderland between typists and textual bodies speaking and writing and physicality and imagination in online encounters. Through careful ethnographic investigations of a text-based virtual world called WaterMOO, Sundén shows how texts, bodies, and machines are linked together in ways that demand a new understanding of the writing subject. Drawing on contemporary feminist and queer theory, she questions the opposition between disembodied high-tech masculinity and embodied earth-bound femininity, insisting on the need for a radical materialization of cybercultural studies that discloses the virtual as itself embodied.

Blade Runner and the Cinema of Philip K. Dick Jeremy Robinson, 2009. A study of the classic science-fiction film Blade Runner (1982) and movies based on the fiction of Philip K. Dick (1928–1982).

Electronic Tribes Tyrone L. Adams, Stephen A. Smith, 2008-06-01. Whether people want to play games and download music, engage in social networking and professional collaboration, or view pornography and incite terror, the Internet provides myriad opportunities for people who share common interests to find each other. The contributors to this book argue that these self-selected online groups are best understood as tribes, with many of the same ramifications, both positive and negative, that tribalism has in the non-cyber world. In Electronic Tribes, the authors of sixteen competitively selected essays provide an up-to-the-minute look at the social uses and occasional abuses of online communication in the new media era. They explore many current Internet subcultures, including MySpace, com.craftster.org, massively multiplayer online role-playing games (MMORPGs) such as World of Warcraft, music downloading, white supremacist and other counterculture groups, and Nigerian e-mail scams. Their research raises compelling questions and some remarkable answers about the real-life social consequences of participating in electronic tribes. Collectively, the contributors to this book capture a profound shift in the way people connect: as communities formed by geographical proximity are giving way to communities both online and offline formed around ideas.

The Cyborg Turn James A. Inman, 1999
