Current Topics in Innate Immunity John D. Lambris, 2007-09-07 Innate Immunity has long been regarded as the non specific arm of immune response acting immediately and in a generic way to defend the host from infections In the post genomic era our knowledge of the innate immune system is enriched by findings on the specificity of innate immune reactions as well as to novel functions that do not strictly correlate with immunological defense and surveillance immune modulation or inflammation Several studies indicate that molecules involved in innate immunity exert functions that are either more complex than previously thought or go well beyond the innate immune character of the system The advent of high throughput platforms for genome and proteome wide profiling together with the enormous amount of raw genetic information that has accumulated in the databases have stirred new expectations in biomedical research They have led scientists to revisit established biological systems from a global and integrative perspective Innate Immunity research is now faced with the challenge of trying to integrate isolated biochemical pathways into complex gene and protein regulatory circuits In this respect scientists from around the world convened at the 4th International Conference on Innate Immunity June 4-9 2006 in Corfu Greece to discuss recent advances in this fast evolving field This volume represents a collection of topics on natural killer cells mast cells phagocytes toll like receptors complement host defense in plants and invertebrates evasion strategies of microorganisms pathophysiology protein structures design of therapeutics and experimental approaches discussed during the conference
