Implications of Remote Work on Employee

Well-being and Health Rolf Van Dick, Anja Baethge, Nina M. Junker, 2024-12-31 The rapidly growing field of organizational psychology has over the last few years become one of the fastest growing branches of psychology. Particularly taking care of the health and well being of employees in the workplace cannot only be considered a moral imperative but has begun globally to be recognised as driving forces of socio economic growth. Employee health and well being is crucial to organizations in regards to improved productivity, employee performance, job satisfaction, staff retention, reduced absenteeism, increased job satisfaction and work commitment. Thus research relating to employee well being and health has produced some significant results and furthered our understanding of this subsection of the organizational psychology field. The evolution of the way we work has also gained traction in the organizational psychology field in relation to remote working. Since the Covid 19 pandemic many workforces have adapted more or less permanently to this form of working. Frontiers has organized a series of Research Topics to highlight the latest advancements in research across the field of organizational psychology and the implications of remote working. This editorial initiative of particular relevance led by Professor Rolf van Dick, Specialty Chief Editor of the Employee Well being and Health section alongside Dr Anja Baethge and Dr Nina Junker is focused on the implications of remote working on employee well being and health. Tree Care Industry, 1996 Real People Working in Education Blythe Camenson, 1997 Gives an insider's view of the diverse careers available in the fields related to education including kindergarten and elementary school teaching, high school teaching and guidance counseling, adult education, four year college and university teaching, writing and journalism, radio and television reporting and broadcasting, museum work and library science and archives. Journal of College Placement, 1982 After the Pandemic Randy Whitaker, 2022-10-10 Many things define a job seeker: experience, education, first impressions, connections, passion, and the value you might bring to the company you wish to work for. For decades the perceived ideal candidate would have all of the above, most of the above; however a good candidate would have a four year college degree. To a great extent an employer still would like someone with a four year college degree. However I believe this is changing. The need for those who work with their hands and those who are willing to work their way up through the various levels of an organization is becoming more and more desired by companies. The time it will take you to earn your degree, you could be making a nice living and will have accrued zero debt in the process. Plus after working in an industry of your choice, something you do have an interest in, even a passion for, you may be on equal footing with a newly hired college grad based on the four years you have been working in your industry of choice as you continue to work your way up through the company. You will find the more value you bring to a company the more they will look to you to assume great responsibility. Typically the more responsibility the greater the paycheck. What makes this book timely is the fact as COVID 19 winds down we are seeing many labor shortages in many areas and industries. Now is the absolute best time to go to an industry experiencing a labor shortage or enter one of the numerous industries researched in this book and get yourself the job you always wanted without the cost and time involved with getting a four year college education I have nothing against getting a degree and there are still many fields where they will always be mandatory however the trades service industries government railroads law enforcement plus many others will welcome you with open arms without the need for a four year degree I hope this book helps
