G. Otte, 2017-09-28 For historians centennial commemorations furnish an excellent heuristic tool for gauging late nineteenth and early twentieth century attitudes towards the past and the present Centenary celebrations helped to revive perpetuate and reinforce public perceptions of historical events and people in collective memory They were fairly infrequent before 1850 but increased in size and numbers by the end of the long nineteenth century so much so that a cult of the centenary had become established throughout the wider Western world around 1900 At one level such events were ephemeral affairs And yet many left a lasting legacy Above all as part of the contemporary processes of the invention of traditions and the conscious national self historicization of the established nation states they offer crucial insights into the social cultural and political dynamics of the period      London Statues Arthur Byron, 1981      What the Victorians Made of Romanticism Tom Mole, 2017-10-17 This insightful and elegantly written book examines how the popular media of the Victorian era sustained and transformed the reputations of Romantic writers Tom Mole provides a new reception history of Lord Byron Felicia Hemans Sir Walter Scott Percy Bysshe Shelley and William Wordsworth one that moves beyond the punctual historicism of much recent criticism and the narrow horizons of previous reception histories He attends instead to the material artifacts and cultural practices that remediated Romantic writers and their works amid shifting understandings of history memory and media Mole scrutinizes Victorian efforts to canonize and commodify Romantic writers in a changed media ecology He shows how illustrated books renovated Romantic writing how preachers incorporated irreligious

Romantics into their sermons how new statues and memorials integrated Romantic writers into an emerging national pantheon and how anthologies mediated their works to new generations This ambitious study investigates a wide range of material objects Victorians made in response to Romantic writing such as photographs postcards books and collectibles that in turn remade the public's understanding of Romantic writers Shedding new light on how Romantic authors were posthumously recruited to address later cultural concerns What the Victorians Made of Romanticism reveals new histories of appropriation remediation and renewal that resonate in our own moment of media change when once again the cultural products of the past seem in danger of being forgotten if they are not reimagined for new audiences
