Discovery In Literature:

The Art of Discovery Margareth Hagen,Randi Koppen,Margery Vibe Skagen,2010-08-30 This anthology brings together scholars from literature the natural sciences and the philosophy of science to present new perspectives on the relations between literary and scientific communities Drawing on literature spanning the 19th and 20th centuries as well as Europe and the Americas the authors explore how science has been portrayed from the perspective of literature at different times and in different places as challenge or opportunity promise or scandal The disturbance of science emanates perhaps from its association with a frightening future or its ability to change the appearance of the past the scandal occurs as it recalls us to thresholds and hybrids human and non human animal and machine Science however also emerges as a source of metaphor and imaginative modelling of encodings and decodings representations and discoveries Less prominent in the collection though no less important is the view on how scientific cultures portray literature or the literary academic and how science reflects on itself

Literature is a Voyage of Discovery Tom Bishop,Donatien Grau,2021 A blend of theory and stories from an extraordinary life by a leading cultural figure Tom Bishop has for over sixty years helped shape the literary philosophical cultural artistic and political conversation between Paris and New York As professor and director of the Center for French Civilization and Culture at New York University he made the Washington Square institution one of the great bridges between French innovation and a New York scene in full transformation Bishop was close to Beckett championed Robbe Grillet in the United States befriended Marguerite Duras and H l ne Cixous and organized historic public encounters such as the one between James Baldwin and Toni Morrison He was also a scholar a recognized specialist in the avant garde notably the Nouveau Roman and the Nouveau Th tre In 2012 Bishop invited Donatien Grau to give a talk at NYU This invitation led to conversations many of which are presented in this book and a friendship Literature Is a Voyage of Discovery gathers their dialogues retracing Bishop s career his own history his departure from Vienna his studies his meetings his choices his conception of literature and life his relationship to the political and economic world and the way he helped define the profession of curator as it is practiced today offering a thought provoking look into one of the leading minds of our time

Literature-Related Discovery (LRD). ,2007 Discovery in science is the generation of novel interesting plausible and intelligible knowledge about the objects of study Literature related discovery LRD is the linking of two or more literature concepts that have heretofore not been linked i e disjoint in order to produce novel interesting plausible and intelligible knowledge i e potential discovery A Strange Discovery Charles Romyn Dake,2006-07 It was once my good fortune to assist in a discovery of some importance to lovers of literature and to searchers after the new and wonderful As nearly a quarter of a century has since elapsed and as two others shared in the discovery it may seem to the reader strange that the general public has been kept in ignorance of an event apparently so full of interest Yet this silence is quite explicable for of the three participants none has heretofore written for publication and of my two associates one is a quiet retiring man the other is erratic and forgetful It is also possible that the discovery did not at the time impress either my companions or myself as having that importance and widespread interest which I have at last come to believe it really possesses In any view of the case there are reasons personal to myself why it was less my duty than that of either of the others to place on record the facts of the discovery Had either of them in all these years in ever so brief a manner done so I should have remained forever silent

Narrating Discovery Bruce Robert Greenfield,1992-01 In Narrating Discovery Bruce Greenfield chronicles the development of the antebellum Euro American discovery narrative These narratives depicted the Euro American advance westward not as a violent intrusion into occupied territories but as an inevitable by product of science and civilization Despite the centrality of indigenous peoples in the frontier narratives the landscape was nevertheless sketched in biblical terms as a terrestrial paradise unpeopled and unexplored as writers insisted upon seeing emptiness as the essential quality of the land Beginning with the British writers Hearne Mackenzie and Henry Greenfield then traces the early American narratives of Lewis and Clark Pike and Fremont demonstrating how these agents of the first New World nation state brought a distinct imperial mentality to the frontier viewing it both as foreign and as part of their home But Romantic writers such as Cooper Irving Poe and Thoreau felt ill at ease with the colonialist discourse they inherited and Greenfield shows how to varying degrees each altered a discourse openly based on subjugation to one highlighting profoundly personal and aesthetic responses to the American landscape The book concludes with an illuminating discussion of Thoreau who transformed the discovery narrative from its origins in conflict and institutional authority into the expression of personal identity with the continent as a symbol of American potential Written with clarity and insight Narrating Discovery brings a fresh perspective to current debates over who discovered America and recovers the complexity of frontier experience through a searching look at some of the vivid narrative accounts
