with Huntington's disease HD however do not show the same pattern of semantic memory deficits possibly since the greatest brain damage is found in the striatum AD and HD patients show deficits on a variety of olfactory tasks but their pattern of performance differs somewhat especially for odor memory Given that AD patients show impaired semantic memory and olfactory functioning it was hypothesized that semantic memory for olfaction would be compromised While olfactory functioning is also impaired in HD semantic memory is relatively intact suggesting less impairment of semantic memory for olfaction in HD than AD The striate cortex is relatively spared from changes in both AD and HD patients thus it was hypothesized that the associative networks for colors would be relatively intact in both groups Using triadic comparison tasks similarity judgments were obtained for odors and for colors from 12 AD 12 HD and 24 age matched normal controls 12 for each patient group Using multidimensional scaling MDS analyses the results revealed that AD patients showed a more disorganized MDS map for odors but not for colors than the HD and control groups Semantic memory deficits for odors were further assessed using two multiple choice odor identification tasks one in which the distractor choices were categorically related and another in which the choices were categorically unrelated to the odors to be identified Also two types of questions one probing for detailed contextual knowledge and the other for category knowledge were asked about each odor Results revealed that while AD patients performed similarly in both odor identification conditions p 05 HD and controls made fewer errors in the categorically unrelated condition p 05 Also whereas AD patients made fewer errors answering category compared to detailed questions about odors p
