The Discursive Construction of National Identity by the Newspapers in North Cyprus Sanem Şahin, 2008 The research investigates the discursive construction of a Turkish Cypriot national identity by the newspapers in North Cyprus The aim is to discover the representation and reconstruction processes of national identity within the press and examine the various practices employed to mobilise readers around certain national imaginings Therefore as well as examining the changing concepts of Turkish Cypriot identity throughout history it focuses on how these concepts have been moulded through the Turkish Cypriot media Highlighting historical political economic and cultural factors which contributed to shaping national identities the study locates the Turkish Cypriot media within these relations to offer an understanding of the media environment in which the news texts are produced Using Critical Discourse Analysis in particular the discourse historical approach the research analyses ongoing transformations in the definition of self and other and the linguistic construction and reproduction of national identity in the news discourses Focusing on three significant events that occupied the public and media agenda within the last decade the news discourses are studied based on their content strategies used in the production of national identity and the linguistic means employed in the process With this the nationalist tendencies embedded in news discourses as well as discriminatory and exclusive practices are sought out Finally the study discusses the findings such as the conceptualisation of Turkish Cypriot identity showed variations in time the newspapers did not diverge from the universe of official discourse and rarely challenged the nationalist discourses Yet the newspapers had differences mainly based on their stance to the Cyprus issue and their definition of national interest and identity The conclusions that arise from the research one of which is a suggestion for further research are debated in the study The Discursive Construction of National Identities Through Narratives of Immigration in German and American Social Studies Textbooks Jan M. The SAGE Handbook of Nations and Nationalism Gerard Delanty, Krishan Kumar, 2006-06-14 With its list of distinguished contributors and its wide range of topics the handbook is surely destined to become an invaluable resource for all serious students of nationalism Michael Billig Professor of Social Sciences at Loughborough University and author of Banal Nationalism SAGE 1995 The persistence some would say revival of nationalism across the recent history of modernity in particular the past two decades has taken many scholars in the social sciences by surprise In response interest in the analysis of nationalism has increased and given rise to a great variety of new angles under which to study the phenomenon What was missing in the cacophony of voices addressing nationalism was a volume that brought them together and confronted them with each other This handbook does just that It deserves particular praise for the wide range of approaches and topic included and for the systematic attempt at studying nationalism as a phenomenon of our time not a remnant from the past Peter Wagner Professor of Social and Political Theory European University Institute and Professor of Sociology University of Warwick For students concerned with the contemporary study of nationalism this will be an invaluable publication The three fold division into approaches themes and cases is a very solid and sensible one. The editors have commissioned essays from leading scholars in the field and this handbook provides the best single volume overview of contemporary nationalism. John Breuilly, Professor of Nationalism and Ethnicity, London School of Economics. Nationalism has long excited debate in political, social and cultural theory and remains a key field of enquiry among historians, anthropologists, sociologists as well as political scientists. It is also one of the critical media issues of our time. There are however surprisingly few volumes that bring together the best of this intellectual diversity into one collection. This Handbook gives readers a critical survey of the latest theories and debates and provides a glimpse of the issues that will shape their future. Its three sections guide the reader through the theoretical approaches to this field of study, its major themes from modernity to memory, migration and genocide and the diversity of nationalisms found around the globe. The overall aim of this Handbook is to relate theories and debates within and across a range of disciplines, illuminate themes and issues of central importance in both historical and contemporary contexts and show how nationalism has impacted upon and interacted with other political and social forms and forces. This book provides a much needed resource for scholars in international relations, political science, social theory and sociology.

Discursive Construction of National Identity in American, South African, and Croatian 1999 State of the Nation Addresses Mirjana N. Dedaić, 2004      The Discursive Construction of Austrian National Identity 1945-1955 Catherine Monica Spencer, University of Birmingham, 2003      Higher Education and the Discursive Construction of American National Identity, 1946-2013 Allison L. Palmadessa, 2014. American institutions of higher education have served as a beacon of American idealism and identity since the foundation of the earliest universities. As the nation developed, higher education matured and continued to maintain a position of importance in the future of the nation. While the university has perpetuated a national cultural identity, the nation state has resourced and legitimated the university, co-evolving inextricably linking American national cultural identity and higher education. The goal of this study is to examine the role of higher education in producing and reproducing American cultural identity from 1946 to 2013 and how, if at all, the discursive identity constituted in the United States is bifurcated across class lines as represented in the university and community college respectively. To adequately address this complex topic, methods rooted in critical discourse analysis and a theoretical lens consistent with critical realist interpretations of the creation of material practices are employed to understand the discursive construction of national identity and higher education's role in its production and reproduction.

Abstract from author supplied metadata      The Discursive Construction of European Identities Michał Krzyżanowski, 2010. This book looks at the discursive construction of European identities in a variety of institutional and non-institutional contexts and through a variety of social and political actors. Its multilevel and interdisciplinary approach, rooted in the Discourse Historical tradition of Critical Discourse Analysis, allows for a comparison of identity constructions at different levels of Europe's social and political organisation and in different modes of communication. The book analyses discourses as diverse as those of the EU politicians of Europe's national media as well as of migrants living in Europe It offers a set of integrated models and analytical procedures which bring to the fore the inherent dynamism and complexity of both bottom up and top down European identity constructions

The Discursive Construction of Taiwanese National Identity Chengqiu Wu, 2007 Since the early 1990s more and more people in Taiwan have come to view Taiwan itself as a country independent of China They consider themselves Taiwanese rather than Chinese Drawing on a social constructionist perspective to nationalism and Laclau and Mouffe's theory of discourse this dissertation attempts to analyze the discursive mechanisms that have constructed this new collective imagination by many people in Taiwan that now regard themselves as members of an independent Taiwanese nation The research questions of this dissertation are how has the post 1949 national identity of Taiwan been discursively transformed since the early 1990s What are the discursive and institutional mechanisms that have reproduced the Taiwanese national identity What challenges is the Taiwanese national identity facing To answer these questions this dissertation outlines three nationalist discourses and five representations that have been derived from them regarding Taiwan's status its relationship with mainland China and the national identity of people in Taiwan It examines the changes in Taiwan's discursive regime and symbolic economy since the early 1990s showing how the rise of Taiwanese national identity has been closely related to political leaders' identification with Taiwanese nationalism I argue that the rise of Taiwanese national identity in Taiwan has been an effect of a discursive contestation among the three major nationalist discourses and the polarization of the discursive field This dissertation also explores the provincial origin issue which has been closely related to ethnic tension in Taiwan and the relations between the nationalist discourses and democratization In addition to explore the possibility for a deconstruction of the Taiwanese national identity I examine the challenges that the Taiwanese national identity faces focusing on democracy the Democratic Progressive Party's performance as the ruling party and the cross Strait economic integration and political interactions
