A Corn-Belt Farming System Which Saves Harvest Labor by Hogging Down Crops (Classic Reprint) J. A. Drake, 2018-02-06

Excerpt from A Corn Belt Farming System Which Saves Harvest Labor by Hogging Down Crops: Labor is the most difficult problem to meet on the average corn belt farm. This condition is growing worse instead of better and will probably make it necessary to reorganize a large number of farms in that section. Unless systems of farming are adopted that will eliminate a part of the work required at rush seasons, it means cutting down the acreage that each farmer can handle and the net income as well.

Corn-belt Farming System which Saves Harvest Labor by Hogging Down Crops, 1914 Corn-Belt Farming System Which Saves Harvest Labor by Hogging Down Crops United States. Department of Agriculture, J. A. Drake, 1915

Harvest of Hazards Derek S. Oden, 2017-05-01 Farming has always been a dangerous occupation In the middle of the twentieth century as farmers adopted a wide array of new technologies from tractors to pesticides and fertilizers the dangers became more acute The economic pressures that agriculture faced in this period compounded the perils of these powerful new tools as farmers struggled to stay profitable in the face of widespread consolidation In this study of the farm safety movement in the Corn Belt historian Derek Oden examines why agriculture was so dangerous and why improvements were so difficult to achieve Because farmers were self employed business owners whose employees were mainly family members because they lived far from aid such as hospitals and fire stations and because they had to manage such a diverse array of new technologies they could not easily adopt the workplace safety and public health reforms designed for factories and urban settings In response beginning in the 1940s farmers and a new breed of farm safety specialists relied upon an increasingly elaborate educational campaign to lessen injuries and illnesses on the farm Several government business and nonprofit organizations from the US Department of Agriculture to the National Safety Council and 4 H and the Future Farmers of America worked together to publicize both the dangers of farming and the information farmers needed to stay safe while driving tractors applying anhydrous ammonia or repairing machinery. By the 1960s however the partnership began to break down and by the 1970s the safety movement became increasingly contested as professional and policy divisions emerged. This groundbreaking study incorporates agriculture into the histories of occupational safety and public health.
