Gourevitch, James Shinn, 2010-06-20 Why does corporate governance front page news with the collapse of Enron WorldCom and Parmalat vary so dramatically around the world This book explains how politics shapes corporate governance how managers shareholders and workers jockey for advantage in setting the rules by which companies are run and for whom they are run It combines a clear theoretical model on this political interaction with statistical evidence from thirty nine countries of Europe Asia Africa and North and South America and detailed narratives of country cases This book differs sharply from most treatments by explaining differences in minority shareholder protections and ownership concentration among countries in terms of the interaction of economic preferences and political institutions It explores in particular the crucial role of pension plans and financial intermediaries in shaping political preferences for different rules of corporate governance The countries examined sort into two distinct groups diffuse shareholding by external investors who pick a board that monitors the managers and concentrated blockholding by insiders who monitor managers directly

Examining the political coalitions that form among or across management owners and workers the authors find that certain coalitions encourage policies that promote diffuse shareholding while other coalitions yield blockholding oriented policies
Political institutions influence the probability of one coalition defeating another      Political Power & Corporate Control
