Reflections from A Twisted Mind Jerald Lucas, 2024-12-03 The title of this book comes from comments made by friends of the author in response to reading his early writings which were often a jumble of words thoughts and feelings It was also influenced by reactions to one of the author's drawings similar to an illustration in the book Both comments were identical You have a twisted mind These writings were assembled in a random sequence similar to how they were written or rewritten not reflective of the dates they were written adding to the twisted mind idea The poems are about growing up history love change friendship life and loss There are works that are tied to programs prepared by the author while working for the National Park Service Some of the poems were written about events that occurred during the author's time in the service while others were about friends and friendship The author believes that as his views and life change his writing should reflect those changes Many of these poems reflect those changes with the dates they were changed This author knows that often the change of a single word can change the tone texture color and emotion a piece generates Often the changes were one word with others it was a line and some have had multiple changes The author is also the creator of the illustrations accompanying the poems His work is rough sketchy and somewhat amateurish This is a reflection of his creative process and his attempt to expand his creative fields As his writings started rough and unpolished so was the artwork linked with it You are invited to take a stroll through the labyrinth of the author's mind across an expanse of space and time
