Darrington Mining Town Timber Town:

Darrington, Mining Town/timber Town Elizabeth S. Poehlman, 1979 The cast of characters in Elizabeth Poehlman's book Darrington Mining Town Timber Town reads like a Wild West novel set in Paul Bunyan country. But this is no novel. Poehlman has written a memorable small town history. The book starts in the late 1800s with the struggles of Chief Wawetkin and the Sauk Suiattle Indians to deal with the onset of miners and settlers throughout their homelands deep in what would soon be renamed the North Cascades mountains in the new state of Washington. Subsequent chapters feature gold fevered miners and a revenge murder, a hotel owner who asked to be deputized for a half hour to deal with a knife-wielding drunk, the sheriff who couldn't handle the town doctor who kept a bear cub as a pet, the sky pilot minister who was too scared to preach in the rough railroad logging camps, opting to show slides instead, the Tarheels who followed the timber industry from North Carolina and brought their love of bluegrass and moonshine, the Depression era housewife who distrusted banks and stashed her family's savings around her waist in a hidden money belt enough to almost pay off their land and house. Darrington as Poehlman learned while living there may be backwoods but never boring. An Open Pit Visible from the Moon Adam M. Sowards, 2020-04-16 Situated among the North Cascade Mountains of Washington State in the Glacier Peak Wilderness Area, Miners Ridge contains vast quantities of copper. Kennecott Copper Corporation's plan to develop an open pit mine there was announced in 1966, the first test of the mining provision of the Wilderness Act passed by Congress in 1964. The battle over the proposed Open Pit, Big Enough to Be Seen from the Moon as activists called it, drew the attention of both local and national conservationists who vowed to stop the desecration of one of the West's most scenic places. Kennecott Copper had the full force of the law and mining industry behind it in asserting its extractive rights. Meanwhile, the U.S. Forest Service was determined to defend its authority to manage wilderness. An Open Pit Visible from the Moon tells the story of this historic struggle to define the contours of the Wilderness Act, its possibilities and limits. Combining rigorous analysis and deft storytelling, Adam M. Sowards re-creates the contest between Kennecott and its shareholders on one hand and activists on the other, intent on maintaining wilderness as a place immune to the calculus of profit. A host of actors cross these pages: from cabinet secretaries and a Supreme Court justice to local doctors and college students, all contributing to a drama that made Miners Ridge a cause célèbre for the nation's wilderness movement. As locals testified at public hearings and writers penned profiles in the nation's magazines and newspapers, the volatile political economy of copper proved equally influential in frustrating Kennecott's plans. No law or court ruling could keep Kennecott from mining copper, but the pit was never dug. Identifying the contingent factors and forces that converged and coalesced in this case, Sowards's narrative recalls a critical moment in the struggle over the nation's wild places, even as it puts the unpredictability of history on full display. Legal Codes and Talking Trees Katrina Jagodinsky, 2016-04-26 Katrina Jagodinsky's enlightening history is the first to focus on indigenous women of the Southwest and Pacific Northwest and the ways they dealt with the challenges posed by the existing legal regimes of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries In most western states it was difficult if not impossible for Native women to inherit property raise mixed race children or take legal action in the event of rape or abuse Through the experiences of six indigenous women who fought for personal autonomy and the rights of their tribes Jagodinsky explores a long yet generally unacknowledged tradition of active critique of the U S legal system by female Native Americans A Cultural Resource Overview Jan L.
