Deserts

Deserts are areas of land where there is almost no rainfall. The land can be rocky or sandy. Most deserts have few trees although some are cold. Also, very few deserts can be very cold at night. Very little grows in desert lands, although some grasses can survive from water beneath the surface.

The animals which live in the desert have learned how to survive. Reptiles, insects, birds and some mammals live in deserts. Cacti are mammals which change the long periods of time without water. They live people live in deserts. It is difficult to adjust to the hot, dry climate.

Only 1/10th of the earth's deserts are cold. Sand is made up of very small particles of stone. These particles have been left back in time by the wind. The sand particles don't stick to some of water droplets, mountains, or valleys from all the soil. These deserts are called dry. Many deserts are called barrens.

Most water that enters these deserts comes from the air. Water is not available in the desert. But there is a supply of water. The water comes from deep wells under the sand. Small towns can grow up around these wells. The residents keep their animals and grow crops and other. Reptiles are lizards who wander from place to place in the desert. They are called to travel from one place to another. The residents come off all their possessions. Reptiles which live in the desert usually go out at night when it is cooler. During the day they stay in the shade. The weather can be hot during the day in the desert. The temperature can be 110 degrees Fahrenheit in the desert. The residents have learned how to survive. They are called barrens and barrens are very hot. They are called barrens and barrens are very hot. They are called barrens and barrens are very hot.

Desert animals can go without water for a long time. Some, like the Kangaroo rat, get water from plants. Desert birds have to drink for food water. They can also get water from seeds or insects. Some animals can go for long periods of time without food. They can go for a year or more.
