Educational Technology ,1984-07 Teaching, Technology and Educational Design ,2010 This report provides an account of the work accomplished during the Fellowship program Indeed the rate of growth of interest in educational design appears to be accelerating Design is the key theme in this work The steady shift to more active forms of learning in higher education means that university teachers have to think carefully about the design of good learning tasks productive things for students to do as well as about the resources that students will need if they are to stand a reasonable chance of succeeding in their activities These resources turn out to be many and varied For some activities it is enough to have access to carefully selected literature undisturbed time to read and reflect and a chance to discuss important ideas The success of other activities may depend on having appropriate space to work with peers access in that space to online information and collaboration tools and occasional timely guidance from a teacher The incursion of new technologies and their increasing variety and sophistication bring new opportunities for learning but also present much more complex design challenges How can university teachers best help students to make good use of time space technology peer networks and the myriad resources of the Internet The challenges of producing good designs for learning are still very great Indeed they may become greater as students needs diversify personal technologies proliferate and pressures on space resources and the teaching workforce become more intense But design is also a strategy for survival It helps us rethink analyse what s important and focus our actions accordingly Executive summary ed

Hybrid Learning Spaces Einat Gil,Yishay Mor,Yannis Dimitriadis,Christian Köppe,2022-02-04 As we have come to accept the duality of physical and virtual learning spaces as a permanent feature of our educational landscape we begin to question its validity Is this really a dichotomy or is it a continuum Should this be the primary dimension around which we cluster educational experiences how does it intersect and interact with other axes such as formal informal vocational recreational open closed teacher student How do we adapt as teachers learners designers policy makers to this changing landscape How do we shape it to offer an optimal learning experience Such questions led us to conduct a series of academic and professional events on the theme of Hybrid Learning Spaces HLS spaces which challenge and defy the dichotomies above This edited book collates some of the products of that endeavor offering a multi vocal interdisciplinary approach to hybridity in education It connects practical examples design directives and theoretical analysis combining perspectives from technology research and development educational theory and practice architecture and space and product design This book addresses researchers practitioners innovators and policy makers in education technology and design offering broad perspectives and then distilling practical insights in the form of design principles and patterns pedagogical models and predictions of future trends

Baatz, Charles Albert Baatz, 1981 Planning and Managing School Facilities Theodore J. Kowalski, 1989 Theodore Kowalski addresses the administrative procedures associated with planning and managing school facilities As noted at the outset practitioner interest in school facilities has been growing rapidly in recent years because decades of neglect poor planning and cost cutting have created a situation in which large numbers of America's school buildings are in need of major repair or replacement At the same time the realization that costs related to repair and replacement have escalated significantly has fueled a new concern among school facility planning and management Writing for school administrators superintendents and board members as well as graduate students in education Kowalski discusses planning from the perspective of both individual facility projects and more comprehensive district wide efforts The responsibilities associated with administering school buildings are also approached from the individual school and district program perspectives Following an introductory chapter that sketches the history of school facilities and the evolution of planning Kowalski examines contemporary issues in school facilities planning and management The remaining chapters are divided into two groups devoted to planning and the management of existing facilities respectively Turning his attention first to planning activities Kowalski advocates a system analysis approach that is based upon high levels data integration and used in conjunction with a vision driven model of goal development Particular attention is given to the potential participants of planning alternative planning paradigms and the potential pitfalls of various approaches In the section on administering school buildings an overview chapter is followed by separate treatments of school district maintenance managing the individual school and major contemporary problems associated with school facility management Taken as a whole Kowalski's work fills a major gap in the field by focusing attention on a key aspect of school administrative responsibility that until now has received little attention in the professional literature Handbook of Human Performance Technology Harold D. Stolovitch, Erica J. Keeps, 1992-04-10 In forty four original chapters leading researchers and practitioners offer a state of the art perspective on the evolving field of Human Performance Technology HPT a study of technologies designed to enhance human performance and capabilities in the workplace Tracing the historical roots of HPT this book explains its theoretical underpinnings and unveils an array of models and techniques that have proven effective in enhancing individual and organizational performance Advanced Research on Computers in Education Robert Lewis, Setsuko Ōtsuki, 1991 In the field of education advanced research using artificial intelligence and cognitive models is vividly making its appearance clear and deepening our conviction of its effectiveness in practical use This volume is one of the results of the conference which was held with the aim of exploring the current state and future trends of advanced techniques and methodologies in information processing specifically those from artificial intelligence and cognitive science as applied to the field of education
