Shea,1991 A survey of Descartes scientific career

from his student days at the Jesuit College of La Flèche to his departure for Sweden in 1649

A Companion to Descartes Janet Broughton, John Carriero, 2010-11-08 A collection of more than 30 specially commissioned essays this volume surveys the work of the 17th century philosopher scientist commonly regarded as the founder of modern philosophy while integrating unique essays detailing the context and impact of his work Covers the full range of historical and philosophical perspectives on the work of Descartes Discusses his seminal contributions to our understanding of skepticism mind body dualism self knowledge innate ideas substance causality God and the nature of animals Explores the philosophical significance of his contributions to mathematics and science Concludes with a section on the impact of Descartes's work on subsequent philosophers

Descartes Embodied Daniel Garber, 2001 A central theme unifying the essays in this volume on the work of Descartes is the interconnection between Descartes philosophical and scientific interests and the extent to which these two sides of the Cartesian programme illuminate each other

Historia Scientiarum, 2006

Descartes on Seeing Celia Wolf-Devine, 1993 In this first book length examination of the Cartesian theory of visual perception Celia Wolf Devine explores the many philosophical implications of Descartes theory concluding that he ultimately failed to provide a completely mechanistic theory of visual perception Wolf Devine traces the development of Descartes thought about visual perception against the backdrop of the transition from Aristotelianism to the new mechanistic science the major scientific paradigm shift taking place in the seventeenth century She considers the philosopher's work in terms of its background in Aristotelian and later scholastic thought rather than looking at it backwards through the later work of the British empiricists and Kant Wolf Devine begins with Descartes ideas about perception in the Rules and continues through the later scientific writings in which he develops his own mechanistic theory of light color and visual spatial perception Throughout her discussion she demonstrates both Descartes continuity with and break from the Aristotelian tradition Wolf Devine critically examines Cartesian theory by focusing on the problems that arise from his use of three different models to explain the behavior of light as well as on the ways in which modern science has not confirmed some of Descartes central hypotheses about vision She shows that the changes Descartes made in the Aristotelian framework created a new set of problems in the philosophy of perception While such successors to Descartes as Malebranche Locke Berkeley and Hume accepted the core of his theory of vision they struggled to clarify the ontological status of colors to separate what is strictly speaking given to the sense of sight from what is the result of judgments by the mind and to confront a veil of perception skepticism that would have been unthinkable within the Aristotelian framework Wolf Devine concludes that Descartes was not ultimately successful in providing a completely mechanistic theory of visual perception and because of this she suggests both that changes in the conceptual framework of Descartes are in order and that a partial return to some features of the Aristotelian tradition may be necessary

William Harvey and the Use of Purpose in the Scientific Revolution Emerson Thomas McMullen, 1998 A study of the English scientist Harvey 1576 1657 who is credited with discovering that blood circulates and of how he and his contemporaries thought about purpose and chance in the universe Challenges historians and biographers who portray him as acting and thinking like a modern scientist and shows how his deep religious beliefs particularly in divine providence grew out of his political and religious environment and influenced his work Paper edition 0958 9 37 00 Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR A Discourse on Method and Selected Writings René Descartes,1951 Discourse on the Method of Rightly Conducting Reason, and Seeking Truth in the Sciences René Descartes,1910 A Discourse on Method René Descartes,1978 Descartes: A Biography Desmond M. Clarke,2006-03-06 Ren Descartes is best remembered today for writing I think therefore I am but his main contribution to the history of ideas was his effort to construct a philosophy that would be sympathetic to the new sciences that emerged in the seventeenth century To a great extent he was the midwife to the Scientific Revolution and a significant contributor to its key concepts In four major publications he fashioned a philosophical system that accommodated the needs of these new sciences and thereby earned the unrelenting hostility of both Catholic and Calvinist theologians who relied on the scholastic philosophy that Descartes hoped to replace His contemporaries claimed that his proofs of God s existence in the Meditations were so unsuccessful that he must have been a cryptic atheist and that his discussion of skepticism served merely to fan the flames of libertinism This is the first biography in English that addresses the full range of Descartes interest in theology philosophy and the sciences and that traces his intellectual development through his entire career Discourse on Method René Descartes,1956 The GAM/DP Theory of Personality and Creativity William A. Therivel,2001 William A Therivel presents a new theory of personality and creativity at both the individual and societal levels Alhacen on the Principles of Reflection Alhazen,2006 Alhacen's Theory of Visual Perception Alhazen,2001
