Ecumenical Formation in Theological Education: A Precondition for Ecumenical Encounter and a Tool for Ecumenical Reception

Johannes Oeldemann

Johann-Adam-Möckler-Institute for Ecumenism, 33098 Paderborn, Germany; j.oeldemann@moecklerinstitut.de

Abstract: For many decades, Christian churches have engaged in ecumenical dialogues addressing church-dividing issues and trying to overcome them. Many valuable texts have emerged from these dialogues, but they are hardly known in the churches. One reason for this is that “ecumenism” is rarely a topic in theological education. The article asks why this is so and argues for including ecumenical formation in theological studies. It highlights various initiatives that have pursued this goal and provides examples of cross-denominational theological education. Cultivating awareness and sensitivity among the younger generation of theologians towards ecumenical concerns is a precondition for promoting ecumenical encounter and applying the results of ecumenical dialogues to the life and the teaching of the churches.

Keywords: ecumenical formation; theological education; ecumenical dialogue; reception

1. Introduction

The ecumenical movement has shaped the history of Christianity in the 20th century. For young people studying theology in the 21st century, it is already a church-historical phenomenon being studied and explored in lectures and seminars. In 2010, the 100th anniversary of the World Missionary Conference in Edinburgh in 1910 was celebrated, which is regarded as one of the starting points and a landmark in the history of the ecumenical movement (cf. Radano 2012). In 2023, the World Council of Churches (WCC) looks back on 75 years since its foundation in 1948, and in the same year, the Leuenberg Church Fellowship celebrates the 50th anniversary of the Leuenberg Agreement, which was an important ecumenical milestone for the churches stemming from the continental reformation (cf. Birmelé 2023). In addition, 2024 marks 25 years since the signing of the “Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification” (JDDJ) in Augsburg in 1999, in which Lutherans and Catholics succeeded in formulating a basic consensus regarding one of the main points of contention of the 16th century’s reformation. Since then, the JDDJ has also been received by Methodists, Anglicans, and Reformed, so that nowadays, there is agreement on a fundamental question of the Christian understanding of salvation between the five largest churches of Western Christendom (cf. Notre Dame Consultation Statement 2019). However, nowadays, many of the achievements of the ecumenical movement have become already so ingrained in the life of the churches that they are no longer recognised as remarkable success stories. For ecumenism, this is both a blessing and a curse: a blessing because people no longer suffer from the division between the churches; a curse because the motivation for further ecumenical engagement is in danger of being lost.

Having this in mind, the question of how the agreement on questions of faith that has grown in ecumenical dialogues over decades (cf. Growth in Agreement 1984–2017) and the familiar relationship that has developed through personal encounters—in other words: ecumenical knowledge and ecumenical experience—can be passed on to future generations is becoming increasingly important. Ecumenical networks such as the “Societas Oecumenica” (cf. Societas Oecumenica 2023), the European Society for Ecumenical Research, or

Design for Religion Gabriel Moran, 1971 Catechesis for the New Evangelization Brian Pedraza, 2020-06-12 Popes Francis Benedict XVI and John Paul II have called the present a time of New Evangelization for the Church and have stressed the importance of catechesis for this mission John Paul II claimed that this renewal of the Church's mission is grounded in the teachings of the Second Vatican Council Nevertheless approaches to catechesis in the conciliar and postconciliar era have varied greatly as evidenced by the shifts in catechetical practice effected by the modern catechetical movement Just as the dominant forms of theology changed from neo scholastic to anthropological approaches so too did catechesis move from catechism based approaches to more anthropological models based upon human experience In light of this context Catechesis for the New Evangelization examines the theological foundations of catechesis in the Church's understanding of divine revelation and its reception by the human person especially as found in the conciliar constitutions Dei Verbum and Gaudium et Spes After drawing norms on divine revelation from these documents it traces the history of the modern catechetical movement in order to compare this history with the conciliar norms highlighting the renewal's strengths and weaknesses These steps prepare the way for the main part of the book an examination of the anthropology of Karol Wojtya a Pope John Paul II Ultimately his anthropology provides an understanding of the person that can unite divine revelation and human experience in a way that takes what is best from the modern catechetical movement while developing the ministry in a way that can be fruitful for the New Evangelization Pedraza's book is not only an incisive look at modern catechetical history and theory It also touches upon some of the most important theological topics of the past century including the neo scholastic crisis the proper interpretation of the Council the relationship of nature and grace and the modern understanding of the imago dei with the research and competency appropriate for scholarly interest and the accessibility needed for educated practitioners in catechesis Handbook of Research on Catholic Education Thomas C. Hunt, Ellis A. Joseph, Ronald J. Nuzzi, 2001-09-30 This comprehensive compendium of research focuses on key aspects of Catholic education in the United States The volume includes reviews of research on topics ranging from church documents spirituality and the philosophy of Catholic education to parents students teachers administration and governance and curriculum and instruction Benefit to many audiences policy makers church leaders educators researchers students practitioners patrons and citizens who are interested in these schools The wealth of scholarly information provided here covers all areas of Catholic education both school and parish based The first volume of its kind ever published on Catholic learning and development the handbook is an encyclopedia reference tool for the serious scholar as well as the committed Catholic educator Colloquy, 1972
