Creating and Marketing Programs in Continuing Education Elinor Lenz,1980      Developing a Marketing Strategy for Adult and Continuing Education Great Britain. Further Education Unit,1990-01-01 The project described in this report aimed to develop an effective and affordable educational marketing strategy in one local British continuing education provider as a case study for adult and continuing education nationally Methods employed were as follows a marketing consultant visited education centers business and community directories were created a representative sample of existing students was surveyed and focus groups with manual workers sought the workers opinions on adult education Among the findings and conclusions were the following 1 using a variety of sites for adult education permits developing the individual personality of each center to attract different sectors of the community 2 adults expect greater comfort and more attractive surroundings than do school children 3 strategic planning is required to ensure maximum impact from promotional materials relative to the time and resources available to develop them 4 a system for monitoring the materials impact should be developed 5 establishing corporate identity raises the profile of an adult education center 6 a continuing program of research and efforts to secure cooperation and or sponsorships from local companies newspapers and publications should be carried out to inform product development 7 existing courses might be repositioned so as to appeal more directly to new and existing markets 8 staff should be made aware of their function and value within the context of public relations 9 the success rate for re enrolling existing students is likely to be greater than in attracting new students 10 flexible scheduling is important and 11 promotional materials should stress the benefits of enrollment CML      Resources in Education ,1997      Higher Education in the United States James J. F. Forest,Kevin Kinser,2002-06-21 Surveys the changing landscape of American higher education from academic freedom to virtual universities from campus crime to Pell Grants from the Student Privacy Act to student diversity In the years following World War II college and university enrollment doubled students revolted faculty unionized and community colleges evolved Tuition and technology soared as did the number of first generation minority and women students These changes radically transformed the American system of postsecondary education Today that system is in trouble Its aging professoriate prepares for retirement but low academic salaries can no longer attract the best minds to replace them A flood of corporate dollars funds commercial research but money for basic research the seedbed of American scientific preeminence has dried up Colleges and universities also face heated competition with for profit education providers for students faculty and external financial support along with the costs of providing remedial education to growing numbers of students who are unprepared for postsecondary education Higher Education in the United States provides a comprehensive analysis of these issues and others that scholars and practitioners of higher education study discuss and grapple with on a daily basis      Continuing Education for the Health Professional Richard Adelson,Fran S. Pappas,Jerry Jerman,2014-02-25 This issue explores the growing field of adult degree programs and considers the theoretical underpinnings of such programs and hands on issues as curriculum faculty marketing technology financing and accreditation all with a goal of informing and equipping both scholars and practitioners More and more adults who have been out of school for many years have turned to colleges and universities to complete undergraduate and graduate degrees that will make them competitive in the workforce fulfill a professional requirement or enrich them intellectually Higher education institutions and many private organizations have responded to this demand by creating innovative degree programs aimed specifically at mature learners students who want to self design their educational programs and do not hesitate to change institutions if they believe their needs are not being met This explosive growth in adult degree programs is largely the result of distance education technologies and the Internet Other significant factors include the potential such programs have for providing additional revenue streams for institutions the fierce competition from the private sector and other higher education institutions and the rising interest in interdisciplinary programs This is the 103rd volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Adult and Continuing Education     Vocational Education Magazine ,1922     Otto E.
