How can teaching be done effectively How are students best instructed motivated and inspired One must consider the instructor's teaching style personality and attitude Parents often want teachers of their children to instruct in a manner that agrees with their own ideas so seldom will they be pleased Can anybody teach the children as effectively as can the parents

Craftsmanship in Teaching William Chandler Bagley, 2021-08-21 Excerpt CHAPTER I Craftsmanship in Teaching I In the laboratory of life each newcomer repeats the old experiments and laughs and weeps for himself We will be explorers though all the highways have their guideposts and every bypath is mapped Helen of Troy will not deter us nor the wounds of Caesar frighten nor the voice of the king crying Vanity from his throne dismay What wonder that the stars that once sang for joy are dumb and the constellations go down in silence Arthur Sherburne Hardy The Wind of Destiny We tend I think to look upon the advice that we give to young people as something that shall disillusionize them The cynic of forty sneers at what he terms the platitudes of commencement addresses He knows life He has been behind the curtains He has looked upon the other side of the scenery the side that is just framework and bare canvas He has seen the ugly machinery that shifts the stage setting the stage setting which appears so impressive when viewed from the front He has seen the rouge on the cheeks that seem to blush with the bloom of youth and beauty and innocence and has caught the cold glint in the eyes that from the distance seem to languish with tenderness and love Why he asks should we create an illusion that must thus be rudely dispelled Why revamp and refurbish the old platitudes and dole them out each succeeding year Why not tell these young people the truth and let them be prepared for the fate that must come sooner or later But the cynic forgets that there are some people who never lose their illusions some men and women who are always young and whatever may be the type of men and women that other callings and professions desire to enroll in their service this is the type that education needs The great problem of the teacher is to keep himself in this class to keep himself young to preserve the very things that the cynic pleases to call the illusions of his youth And so much do I desire to impress these novitiates into our calling with the necessity for preserving their ideals that I shall ask them this evening to consider with me some things which would I fear strike the cynic as most illusory and impractical The initiation ceremonies that admitted the young man to the privileges and duties of knighthood included the taking of certain vows the making of certain pledges of devotion and fidelity to the fundamental principles for which chivalry stood And I should like this evening to imagine that these graduates are undergoing an analogous initiation into the privileges and duties of schoolcraft and that these vows which I shall enumerate embody some of the ideals that govern the work of that craft II And the first of these vows I shall call for want of a better term the vow of artistry the pledge that the initiate takes to do the work that his hand finds to do in the best possible manner without reference to the effort that it may cost or to the reward that it may or may not bring I call this the vow of artistry because it
