a wealthy white member of the Southern aristocracy is absent throughout the narrator's childhood but nevertheless continues to provide financial support for the narrator and his mother. Because of that financial support she had the means to raise her son in an environment more middle class than many blacks could enjoy at the time. The narrator describes learning to love music at a young age as well as attending an integrated school. It is through his attendance at this school that the narrator first realizes he is African American and thus subject to ridicule and mistreatment for his racial heritage. This discovery occurs when he is publicly corrected by his teacher and the headmaster when he stands when the white scholars schoolchildren are asked to stand. Returning from school the distraught narrator confronts his mother asking her if he is a nigger. His mother reassures him however noting that while she is not white your father is one of the greatest men in the country the best blood of the South is in you. The narrator notes that this event became a racial awakening and loss of innocence that caused him to suddenly begin searching for and finding faults in himself and his mother setting the stage for his eventual decision though far in the future to pass as a white man.
