Contested Arctic Indigenous Peoples Industrial States And The Circumpolar Environment:

Contested Arctic Eric Alden Smith, Joan McCarter, 1997 The Arctic may be the last frontier of colonialism where industrial societies are aggressively exploiting the resources and undermining the social cohesion of indigenous peoples In fact this colonization of the circumpolar north is only now reaching its full momentum Among the new conquistadores are oil company geologists loggers even resource biologists bringing not only industrial pollution but also cultural pollution in their wake For centuries the aboriginal Arctic population has efficiently used resources to meet modest human needs developing a special relationship to the land water and wildlife But at the intersection of national ambitions and arctic ecosystems native communities are being relentlessly squeezed between the ravages of resource extraction and the often naive agendas of environmentalists in urban centers far away This volume explores some of the major threats to the Arctic environment and indigenous peoples responses to these threats Case studies discuss the push for oil and gas development in Canada Alaska and Russia the toxic legacy of the former Soviet Union land tenure conflicts in Russia and wildlife management in Canada and Scandinavia

Human Adaptability Emilio F. Moran, 2018-05-04 Designed to help students understand the multiple levels at which human populations respond to their surroundings this essential text offers the most complete discussion of environmental physiological behavioral and cultural adaptive strategies available Among the unique features that make Human Adaptability outstanding as both a textbook for students and a reference book for professionals are a complete discussion of the development of ecological anthropology and relevant research methods the use of an ecosystem approach with emphasis on
