

Situational context VS. linguistic context

1. Situational context refers to the particular spatiotemporal situation in which an utterance occurs, the main components of which include, apart from the place and time of the utterance, the speaker and the hearer, the actions they are performing at the time, the various objects and events existing in the situation.

2. Linguistic context, sometimes known as context, is concerned with the probability of a word's co-occurrence or collocation with another word, which forms part of the 'meaning' of the word, and also concerned with the part of text that precedes and follows a particular utterance.

The Contexts of Language Ronald Wardhaugh, 1976 Context in Language Learning and Language Understanding Kirsten Malmkjær, John Williams, 1998-10-08 The papers in this volume represent varied views on the role of context in language learning

Language and Situation Michael Gregory, Susanne Carroll, 2018-09-14 Originally published in 1978 This book provides and explains a framework for understanding and describing variations of style of language in relation to the social context in which it is used Constant features of language users such as their temporal geographical and social origins their range of intelligibility and their individualities are related to concepts of dialects but dialects are not the only kind of language variety There are features of language situations that yield others the medium used the roles of the users and their relationships as well as recurring situations and cultural habits all relate to the style employed Variety in language can be seen in terms of the major functions of language as content as inter action and as texture Studying variety in language from sociological and linguistic aspects this book is also interesting for psycholinguistics and literary study

Rethinking Context Alessandro Duranti, 1992-05-21 The last decade has seen a fundamental rethinking of the concept of context Rather than functioning solely as a constraint on linguistic performance context is now also analysed as a product of language use In this new perspective language and context are seen as interactively achieved phenomena rather than predefined sets of forms and contents The essays in this collection written by many of the leading figures in the social sciences critically reexamine the concept of context from a variety of different angles and propose new ways of thinking about it with reference to specific human activities such as face to face interaction radio talk medical diagnosis political encounters and socialisation practices Each essay is prefaced by an introduction by the editors which provides relevant theoretical and methodological background and demonstrates its relation to other essays in the volume The editors general introduction provides a lucid overview of the issues currently debated Rethinking Context will be required reading for everyone working within the fields of linguistic anthropology sociolinguistics discourse analysis pragmatics conversation analysis and the sociology of language

Language and Context Helen Leckie-Tarry, 1995-01-01 Language and Context breaks new ground in our understanding of the relationship between register genre and context Leckie Tarry argues convincingly and engagingly for a functional theory of language which specifies register in terms of contextual and linguistic features and which suggests a discursive relationship between the two Moving beyond the limits of much of today s theory this accessible volume develops a theoretical understanding of the relationship between text context language function and linguistic form Helen Leckie Tarry a specialist in the area of register and applied linguistics died in 1991 aged 49 Although she had finished a large part of this work her notes and draft chapters have been extensively edited by Professor David Birch David Birch is currently Professor of Communication and media Studies at Central Queensland University Australia and previously taught at Murdoch University Western Australia and the National University of Singapore
